Illinois Tornado Swarm Kills 48, Injures 1,500

California Visited By Twister

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three death-dealing tornadoes that turned heavily populated sections of northern Illinois and western Michigan into a nightmare claimed 48 lives yesterday, and searchers feared more bodies would be found in the rubble today.

More than 1,500 persons were injured in the twisters that left vast wastelands in their wake.

The tornadoes killed 25 persons in Oak Lawn, a suburb of Chicago; 20 in Belvidere, Ill., a town of 13,000 about 65 miles northwest of Chicago; 1 in Chicago; 1 in Stone Park, another Chicago suburb, and 1 in Hillsdale County, Mich.

The Chicago Weather Bureau said the tornadoes "appear to be the worst since March 28, 1920. And when the final report is in, it may be the most devasting tornado on record in northeastern Illinois."

At least 38 twisters were spawned by the stormy weather.

CALIFORNIA HIT

Tornadoes also touched down in Missouri, Wisconsin, Indiana and California. One house was damaged in Madera, about 25 miles northwest of Fresno.

Hardest hit as the tornadoes twisted through scores of Illinois communities was Oak Lawn. Among the victims there were a number of young skaters at a roller rink which was demolished.

A big supermarket in Oak Lawn, which had been jammed with Friday evening shoppers, was reduced to rubble. Authorities feared casualties there could raise the death toll.

Nine victims at Belvidere were students. The twister hit as students boarded school buses at Belvidere High School. Some victims, however, were elementary school students who had been picked up earlier by the buses.

BUSES FLYING

Buses were sent sailing through the air like leaves. Others were bounced across the ground and flattened.

Some 200 homes, apartment buildings and garages in a six-block area of Oak Lawn were leveled or left with only fragments of walls standing. A witness said it looked like a war zone.

When the twister struck in Belvidere many students still were in the school. Teachers and pupils rushed into the library and cafeteria.

After-Effects Of LSD Told At Conclave

By JOHN F. KEARNEY

The young man was offered a cocktail at a party, took a sip and immediately shot sky-high on an LSD trip.

He was "switched on" spontaneously without taking the drug, merely by coming into contact with another stimulant, a conference on drugs in Marin County was told today.

This is one of the dangerous side effects becoming more frequent among once only LSD users, which is perplexing medical experts, said Dr. David Smith, head of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Center at San Francisco General Hospital.

He was speaking at the start of an all-day conference on "Psychedelics and Youth — A Dilemma," sponsored by Marin Youth for Action and held in College of Marin gymnasium.

Smith said the young man was now experiencing two or three spontaneous trips a week and that it was frightening the youth. Smith said his patient had experimented with a dose of LSD some three days before the experience at the cocktail party.

Smith said, "It is as if his mind were acting as a computer, and it needed only ordinary drugs to set it off."

Explaining the medical aspects of the drug, Smith said that the most dangerous stage is usually reached when the user suffers hallucinations that are very real to him. "He steps out of his body, and panic is induced when he feels he cannot return," said Smith, citing one of the more bizarre effects of the

Greece Quiet After Coup; 8,500 Jailed

ATHENS (UPI)—The new Greek government said today peace and quiet had been restored to all of Greece following yesterday's army coup which overthrew the government, imposed martial law and jailed 8,500 leftist opponents of King Constantine.

Despite the fact the army coup backed Constantine and as monarch he swore in the new government, there was speculation he did not know of the coup until after it had taken place and that he was not fully in accord with its leaders.

Nicolas Farmakis, a press spokesman for the government, said "peace and quiet are ruling in all parts of the country and any rumors to the contrary are absolutely without foundation." He is a former deputy of the right-wing Radical Union Party (ERE).

Travelers reaching Rome and other cities in Europe said they had heard machinegun firing during the night and sporadic rifle shots but all indications today were the country was returning to normal.

JFK Slaying Puzzle Bared In Philippines

MANILA (AP) — Philippine government agents say they are trying to check the story of a Puerto Rican, described as a Communist agent for Cuba, who indicated he was in Dallas to shoot at President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

Officials of the Philippine National Bureau of Investigation said Luis Castillo, 24, told them under questioning he had been in Dallas at the time of Kennedy's assassination and had been given a rifle to shoot "a man in an open car."

He also said he entered the Philippines in the guise of a Filipino to contact a Communist leader there, the NBI added.

NBI officials presented Castillo to local newsmen yesterday, but blocked efforts to gain further interviews with him, saying this might hamper their investigation.

The Manila Times quoted Castillo as saying he had no idea how he got to Dallas and back to Cuba again because he had been put in a trance.

It said Castillo told NBI investigators that he met an unidentified man in Dallas who took a dismantled rifle from a bowling bag, put it together and gave it to the Puerto Rican.

Castillo said he received instructions in Dallas through a woman of German descent — a "Mrs. Jole," the Times said. It quoted Castillo as saying he was not able to use the rifle in Dallas, but heard that a man called Joe had succeeded.

Manila newspaper reports said the NBI used truth serum, hypnosis and lie detector tests in questioning Castillo.

The NBI said Castillo was arrested in Bulacan Province south of Manila March 2, a month after he entered the country.

Soviets Expected To Start Next Space Spectacular At Any Time

MOSCOW (UPI) —The Soviet Union will attempt to alunch two space ships manned by a total of four to six cosmonauts within the next 48 hours, informed sources said today.

The sources said the voyage will include the most spectacular Soviet space venture in history, an attempted in-flight hook-up between the two manned ships and a transfer of crews.

The sources said the voyage was planned to last at least two days and probably more.

Such a launch would put the Soviet Union back in the manned space race with the United States after a lapse of more than two years.

The launch will utilize a new generation of space ships, the sources said.

The new vehicles are reported to be heavier, larger and more sophisticated than their predecessors, the Voshkod (sunrise) and Vostok (east) ships in which Soviet spacemen made their pioneer flights.

Soviet newsmen, photographers and cameramen were alerted to stand by for the launch.

Western scientists reported that space ships orbited under the names of Cosmos 133, Cosmos 140, Cosmos 146, Cosmos 154 and Cosmos 155 had followed flight plans suitable for the recovery of a manned capsule.

Cosmos 146, launched March 10, was the first of the new heavy craft, experts said. Their weight was estimated at 40,000 to 65,000 pounds.

Heliport Fill Plan Loses

The Bay Conservation and Development Commission yesterday rejected a plan to fill 1.9 acres of Richardson Bay near the Sausalito heliport for a motel and restaurant.

The vote was 13-6. Commissioner Joseph Bodovitz of Mill Valley voted with the majority against the proposal, and said a detailed plan of the shoreline in the area should be adopted before a specific project is approved.

Industrialist Louis Ets-Hokin led audience opposition, saying the proposal failed to meet the criteria for filling established by the legislature and that a motel and restaurant there would not benefit the Bay Area.

The $500,000 development was advanced by Commodore Properties. Alex Trellis, representing the developer, urged something "creative and attractive" be done with the area.

Snow Triggers Fear Of Valley Flooding

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Disaster Office has gone on the alert against possible flooding from California's heavy mountain snowpack, an administration spokesman said yesterday.

"We are expecting trouble," Lyn Nofziger, communications secretary for Gov. Ronald Reagan, said. Nofziger said warm rain on the snowpack could cause flooding at lower elevations.

Robot Digs Luna, Finds Little New

PASADENA (AP) — Surveyor 3 dug a trench about three feet long and at least six inches deep in the surface of the moon today but uncovered nothing spectacular.

The trench, the second scooped out by a two-by-five-inch shovel in less than three hours, turned up a considerable amount of lumpy material much like that on the undisturbed surface.

Pictures of the operation, televised to controllers at Jet Propulsion Laboratory showed no surprises and nothing to indicate the moon's surface might be unsafe for manned landings.

Shortly after midnight, the spidery device did its first digging — a foot-long trench in three jerky motions lasting two seconds each.

A television camera, mounted just above the scoop's extendable arm, relayed a series of photographs of the history-making operation to its controllers.

Higher Death Rate Needed For Man?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mankind must cut its birth rate or expand its death rate, according to a Stanford University biology professor.

"The battle to feed humanity is being lost," Dr. Paul R. Ehrlich yesterday told the Commonwealth Club of California.

Dr. Ehrlich said that the world food supply must be tripled between now and the year 2,000 if the people then alive are to be reasonably fed.

He was especially critical of those who say the sea will provide an inexhaustible source of food. He called such an idea "a pipe dream."

"Those who would have us solve the world's problems by increasing food supplies always point to the ocean as an almost limitless source of nourishment.

"This nonsense distracts our attention from the real issue—the crucial problem of stopping world population growth."

"The disease of this planet is over-population," he said. "The only possible cures are drastic reduction in birth rate, or drastic increase in the death rate." He suggested the latter might include a nuclear holocaust or a deliberate plague.

Dr. Ehrlich said non-compulsory family regulation should be attempted such as legalized abortions and tax rewards for small families.

These failing, he recommended that contraceptives might be added to the water or food supply. An antidote would then have to be taken to permit reproduction.

California, he said, should begin to discourage outsiders from moving into the state—even though they bring temporary economic benefits.

Californians' children, he warned, otherwise could wind up wearing smog masks, eating seaweed substitutes for steaks, and under vinyl trees planted in asphalt.

Sierra Summit Parley For Two Governors

For California Gov. Ronald Reagan and Nevada Gov. Paul Laxalt, it was mainly a social event. But it also gave the two Republican governors a chance to talk about politics and pollution.

Both governors are on record expressing concern about the pollution danger to pristine-clear Lake Tahoe from home and resort developments along its shoreline.

"Once the water turns green, the ball game's over," Reagan said recently. The lake has been infected by a green algae.

Laxalt already has announced plans to call a special session of Nevada's legislature to consider creation of a two - state Tahoe Regional Agency.

A nine-member Lake Tahoe Joint Study Committee warned in a March report that the federal government will intervene unless something is done to halt the pollution march. The committee was created by the 1965 legislatures of both states.

The problem is people. The joint committee said the current lake-side population was 28,750 permanently and 150,000 at the peak of the summer gambling season. But it estimated the prospective 1980 population at 49,000 residents and 313,000 during the tourist season.

Supervisors To Fight Medi-Cal Cost Shift

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California county officials will be in Sacramento in force Monday to protest a proposal that would lead to a local property tax increase to support the Medi-Cal program.

Lodging the protest against a Senate bill that would overhaul financing methods for the huge medical program will be the County Supervisors Association.

They have filed objections to a plan to make the counties pay half the increase in costs of medical care given at county hospitals for indigents starting July 1. It is estimated the tab for this particular category of Medi-Cal will be $44 million with the state and counties paying $22 million each.

When the Medi-Cal legislation was adopted in 1965, the state guaranteed the counties it would meet all the rise in costs over a 1964-65 base.

The Senate bill, which could come up for debate Monday afternoon, is designed to straighten out financial problems. The total Medi-Cal program is expected to cost $904 million in federal, state and county funds next fiscal year. This would be an estimated $117 million more than for the current year.

The supervisors say an increase in local property taxes would be necessary if the bill goes through. They have scheduled a meeting for 10 a.m. Monday at Sacramento's Senator Hotel, and about 200 county officials from throughout the state are expected to attend.

Marijuana Count Suspect In Court

George Clarke Davis III, 27, of 53 Redwood Drive, Kentfield, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a felony charge of possession of marijuana.

Plea entry is at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Davis allegedly had a small quantity of marijuana in his home yesterday when sheriff's officers went there to investigate a report of child neglect. No neglect was found, they said.

Burglar Takes Clothes

A burglar broke a rear door window, then entered the home of Mrs. Frank W. Neads, 32 Homestead Boulevard, Homestead Valley, on Wednesday to steal a small quantity of clothing, sheriff's officers said yesterday.

Compulsory Classes Bill Over Hurdle

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A major revision in California education headed toward an important legislative hurdle today despite objections from school chief Max Rafferty's office.

The proposal would sharply limit state requirements on subjects school districts must offer and studies students must pass in order to graduate.

The measure cleared the Senate Education Committee in an 8-3 vote yesterday and was sent to the Senate Finance Committee, headed by Sen. George Miller Jr., D-Martinez, the bill's sponsor.

Everett Calvert, deputy to Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty, said that the school chief opposed the bill because of its provision to drop daily school physical education as a requirement.

Calvert said Rafferty would support it otherwise.

Miller's bill essentially leaves only such fundamental subjects as English and mathematics as elementary school requirements. For high school graduation, specific requirements would be English, American history, American government and physical education ona non-daily basis.

High schools would be required to offer a list of subjects from which students would elect their choices.

"This is the first step toward a permissive education code and could be a forerunner of significant education advances in California," Miller said.

Spokesmen for both foreign language and physical education groups tried unsuccessfully to modify the proposal.

The bill's main critic on the education committee, Sen. J. Eugene McAteer, D-San Francisco, objected to giving local school boards more power over curriculum. Board members, he said, aren't required to meet any qualifications for service.

"The standards for boards of education," Miller retorted, "are about the same as the standards for running for the legislature."

Svetlana Calls U.S. Home

Svetlana

"I believe one's home can be anywhere that one can feel free," said Svetlana Stalina in a moving statement on her arrival yesterday at Kennedy International Airport where she arrived on a jetliner from Switzerland.

The five-page statement, however, told of her decision to seek "freedom of self-expression" instead of the dogmas of Communism.

She said she would stay with "a friend" and begin work on her 80,000-word manuscript about her life as Stalin's favorite child.

The book, written in 1963 and as yet untitled, will be published next fall by Harper & Row. She will supervise transiation of the autobiography into English.

Mme. Stalina's statement was laced with references to God and religion, in addition to her loss of faith in Communism and her sadness over being separated from her son and daughter—Iosif, 21, and Yekaterina, 14—who are still in Moscow.

"When I became a grown-up person I found it impossible to exist without God in one's heart," she declared. "Instead of struggling and causing unnecessary bloodshed, people must work together for the progress of humanity . . . there are no capitalists or Communists for me."

The U.S. State Department said Mme. Stalina will be free to remain in the United States as long as she pleases.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Adam Clayton Powell has delayed a new showdown over his House seat—a fight headcounts indicate he again would lose—by deciding to await further court action before trying to claim his new election certificate.

Reagan Cuts Opposed By Psychiatrists

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Mendocino State Hospital will have to abandon its 2,600-patient alcoholic treatment program if Gov. Ronald Reagan's mental health cutbacks are imposed, the hospital administrator said yesterday.

Dr. Ernest W. Kaltte told an Assembly Budget Subcommittee that if there is a 20 per cent reduction in the staff at the Northern California facility "I don't see how we can continue it at any level."

However, Dr. James V. Lowry, director of the state Department of Mental Hygiene, said his calculations indicated the program, which he called "one of the outstanding programs in the country," will be able to continue, but with 1,000 fewer admissions a year.

Dr. Alfred Auerback, San Francisco, the vice president of the American Psychiatric Association, attacked Reagan's cutbacks as "medically and morally wrong, inhumane, unjust, improvident and financially irresponsible."

"To effect relatively small savings," he told the subcommittee, "the administration has given little thought to the effect these savings will have on the

Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, chairman of the subcommittee, recessed until Tuesday the second day of hearings into the governor's plan to eliminate 3,700 jobs in the Department of Mental Hygiene. The subcommittee heard testimony throughout the day, but it took no action.

State Park Bond Issue Now Short Of Land Costs

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The state Parks Commission was told yesterday that $85 million voters approved for the purchase of new parkland was outdated because of increasing land costs.

Parks and Recreation Director William Penn Mott Jr. said some park projects would have to be cut out or postponed but he did not indicate which ones.

The 1965 Legislature approved 10 of 17 projects recommended by the commission, and the 1966 session passed 20 projects for a total of $76.2 million. Another 11 proposals were recommended last fall but none has been included in the current budget.

The commission appointed a three-man committee to work with Mott. Projects to be cut will be announced next month.

Woman In Court After Hot Chase In Dogs Case

Lorraine Gunnar, 46, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on four misdemeanor counts following a wild chase by four police cars on Highway 101 on Wednesday.

The defendant, of 31 Manzanita Avenue, San Rafael, was not present but was represented by attorney W. O. Weissich of San Rafael. Judge Peter Allen Smith scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Gunnar, wanted in Nevada County on a felony charge of grand theft of a $500 hunting dog from a Sacramento man in 1963, is charged in Marin County with reckless driving, hit-run with her vehicle in a collision with a sheriff's car, having no driver's license, and failure to heed police red lights and sirens.

The chase started after deputies attempted to arrest her in her car in the 300 block of Canal Street, San Rafael, on the Nevada County warrant. She is free on $15,001 bail.

Another 21 Miles For Explorers

LENORE, Idaho (AP) — Four Lewis and Clark college students following the trail of explorers Lewis and Clark traveled 21 miles yesterday from Orofino to a camping site three miles west of here. It took them just about five hours to reach their camp site, 22 miles east of Lewiston.

Ron Hainline, 19, Grants Pass, Ore., said the quartet plans to rest and study for a day since they are several days ahead of schedule and sunny weather is predicted. Almost continuous rain has made studying all but impossible.

The other three students making the journey to mark the centennial celebration by the Portland school are Gerald L. Everson, 22, Los Altos, Fred Tower, 20, Sausalito, and Bruce Mackey, 22, Alturas.

They plan to camp tomorrow at Spalding, about 10 miles east of Lewiston, and will be in Lewiston Monday.

Hainline said their progress has been hampered by rainy weather since the trek began April 8 at Lolo Pass.

"Friday was one of the first chances we have had to do anything but try to stay warm and dry.

"We have not had much privacy, but the people of Idaho have been just wonderful," said Hainline. "We wish we could have stopped to talk with all the people who beckoned to us from the river bank, but we were too busy running the rapids."

strange drug.

Smith recommended that the user not be rushed to an emergency hospital, since he would respond better to tranqualizers given in "a warm unthreatening environment" rather than the ordinary alien surroundings of the institution.

Turning to marijuana, he said this was less toxic than alcohol although it produced many of the same effects.

"I am not saying you should smoke marijuana instead of drinking alcohol, because marijuana is illegal and alcohol isn't," Smith said.

Joseph Lohman, dean of the school of criminology at the University of California, Berkeley, said that if society truly considered marijuana less dangerous than alcohol, the people should change the law rather than devise devious means to break it.

To the argument that marijuana use was not addictive, Lohman replied that it exposed the individual to the "subterranean criminal market in drugs."

In his opinion drugs were usually taken by people alienated from the mainstream of American life through race, income or age.

Young people are increasingly feeling they have been denied decision-making roles because of their age and hence tend to make decisions within a subculture of their own, Lohman said.

A 70-question survey on the use of marijuana and LSD was distributed among the audience of 200 persons of all ages attending the morning session. The survey will contribute statistics to a second conference on narcotics to be sponsored by Marin Youth for Action early next year.

Other speakers scheduled today were Dr. Paul Lea, associate professor of philosophy at the University of California at Santa Cruz, Neil Abercrombie, Marin County probation officer, and Henry Jefferson Sudduth, a hippie known as "Buddha."

Clues Sought In San Rafael Hall Blazes

San Rafael police and firemen sifted through ashes and ruins last night and today in unsuccessful search for clues to arsonists who set two major fires yesterday morning.

Police said burglars set fire to the Odd Fellows Building, 1514 Fifth Avenue, after ransacking medical offices in the building and stealing $175 from the office of Dr. Arnold A. Nutting.

The second fire gutted the old Donahue mansion at 1411 Lincoln Avenue, which was used as a Sunday school by the adjacent First Baptist Church of San Rafael. Fire Battalion Chief Robert Rogers said today that fire too was probably set. Investigators "are operating on that assumption," Rogers said.

No new leads were reported in the investigation. The fires were the latest in a series involving religious and semi-public buildings in and near San Rafael in recent weeks.

Mendocino Visit For Williams

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Spencer Williams, health and welfare agency chief, says he will visit Mendocino State Hospital next month in response to an appeal by patients.

Williams will confer with the patients and administrators and discuss the effect of Gov. Reagan's mental health cutbacks, a Reagan press aide said Friday.

Reagan has said he wouldn't be able to make such visits himself, but agreed to send Williams.

Fog Follows Hail, Rain In County

Fog shrouded parts of Marin County last night following heavy scattered showers, closing flight lines at Marin County Airport and Hamilton Air Force Base this morning to visual flying.

The fog cleared to allow visual flight at 8:20 a.m. at Hamilton and 8:45 a.m. at the county airport.

Hail fell in an intense rainstorm at approximately 5 p.m. yesterday at Strawberry and scattered rain fell through the night in other areas. Forecast today was for more of the same, with a 30 per cent chance of showers tonight and a 60 per cent chance tomorrow.

One-Car Crash Hurts Teeners

Two Belvedere 19-year-olds were in fair condition at Marin General Hospital today with injuries received in a one-car accident at about 8:30 p.m. yesterday at Tiburon Boulevard and Trestle Glen Drive.

Bradley J. Johnson of 4 Golden Gate Avenue had a broken left leg and a possible brain concussion. Christopher Kingston of 329 San Rafael Avenue had severe face cuts.

An ambulance driver at the scene said it appeared the car may have hit a center divider. California Highway Patrol had no report on the accident this morning.

Mill Valley Planners Due Design Session

Films and a talk on urban design will be presented Monday to Mill Valley Planning Commission by Torben Strandgaard, San Rafael architect and University of California lecturer, at 8 p.m. in the gallery of the library.

Also on the agenda is the Association of Bay Area Governments' preliminary master plan for the bay area.

Panoramic Highway Fire Hydrants Sought

The Muir Woods Park Improvement Association voted last night to recommend to the Marin Board of Supervisors installation of fire hydrants along Panoramic Highway when a six-inch water main is put in this summer.

The association also discussed obtaining funds from the county for fire fighting equipment and saw a film, "Greenbelt, USA," a film about fire-resistant plants, which was shown by Asst. County Fire Chief Stan Rowan.

Castor Bean Victim Reported Improved

Two-year-old Lisa Sternberger was reported "somewhat improved" and in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital, where she was admitted Wednesday after nibbling on a toxic castor bean from a Mexican necklace.

The Marinwood girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter C. Sternberger of 2066 Huckleberry Road, was listed in serious condition yesterday. Health officials have warned that eating castor beans can be fatal.

'Love-In' Scheduled For Aptly-Named Site

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Spring is here and a local disc jockey plans to celebrate tomorrow with a "love in." What could be more appropriate than Eden Park?

"We just want folks, young and old, to come and make a friend, share an orange, listen to guitar music, hold hands and delight in the joy of spring," says Dave Michaels.

U.S. Rushing Troops North

SAIGON (UPI)—A U.S. military spokesman reported today the United States had rushed nearly 10,000 reinforcements to the northern provinces of South Vietnam where two major Communist offensives threaten. B-52s carried out five strikes against the enemy buildup.

A few miles to the south U.S. Marines fought a day-long battle with Communist guerrillas south of Da Nang in a battle reported growing steadily in intensity. In the first few hours of fighting the Marines killed 46 Viet Cong; American losses were not reported.

The Air Force said pilots carried out 118 missions against North Vietnam yesterday, slashing into the Red River Valley northwest of Hanoi to hit key rail yards. They said MIGs rose to challenge them but that no dogfights resulted. North Vietnam claimed one U.S. plane shot down.

At the same time Hanoi radio broadcast a report that the big raid Thursday on power stations in Haiphong had killed more than 160 civilians.

Youth Arraigned On Marijuana

Plea entry is at 1:30 p.m. Friday.

The youth, of 1118 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Kentfield, allegedly had marijuana in Larkspur last Sunday when arrested by Larkspur and Corte Madera police.

CMA Opposes Fee Proposal

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Medical Association (CMA) is on record as opposing a proposal to limit the amount of a doctor's fee under the Medi-Cal program.

"This proposal is completely contrary to the stated intent of the Medi-Cal law," CMA President John G. Morrison said yesterday. "It completely reverses Medi-Cal's original intent to provide high quality medical care to the state's indigents."

Dr. Morrison issued the statement after the Senate Finance Committee voted for the limit as an amendment to the Medi-Cal bill. It would set a top charge of $5.50 for a medical care unit or doctor's visit.

Sausalito Trustees Plan Budget Study

Sausalito School District trustees will hold their first study of the budget for fiscal 1967 Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the district office, Wateree and Nevada streets. Preliminary budget figures will be prepared on the basis of decision on salaries and program to be considered Monday, reported Asst. Supt. Joseph Amato.

Also on the agenda is proposed sale of Richardson Bay and Central School sites to finance an "educational park" on the Bayside School site.

Nixon Visits Iran; Greece Stop Off?

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon arrived today for a one-day visit on his private Asian and Near East fact-finding trip.

Nixon was scheduled to go to Athens Sunday but a spokesman said his travel plans may be altered because of the coup in Greece.

UAW Prepares Pact Demands; Strike Feared

DETROIT (AP) —The United Auto Workers will take to the bargaining table later this year a broad set of contract demands which many see as forebodings of a strike.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther estimated fewer than 10 among some 3,000 convention delegates opposed the goals as they were adopted yesterday. An auto industry spokesman estimated money to meet them would "run into astronomical figures."

With the goals outlined, Reuther came to a showdown today with his 1.4 million-member union on his threat to remove it from the AFL-CIO.

All indications pointed to Reuther getting what he wants: authority for his international executive board to pull the union out of the AFL-CIO, when and if it chooses.

Reuther has demanded, in effect, reconstruction of the AFL-CIO as the price of his union remaining a member. He has accused the federation of permitting the labor movement to "vegetate" under leadership of George Meany.

Authorities at Belvidere and Oak Lawn worked through the night, sifting debris for bodies and survivors. Dozens searched the ruins of 200 structures in Oak Lawn for survivors believed trapped in the basements covered with debris.

"We have all kinds of areas to the west of here where we haven't even broken ground yet," a searcher said in Oak Lawn.

Elsewhere in Illinois, there were scattered reports of damage from tornadoes, high winds and thunderstorms in Lake Zurich, Waukegan, Libertyville, Barrington, Orion, Moline, Rock Island, Harvard and scores of other communities.

Both were graduated from Tamalpais High School. Phyllis attended the University of Wyoming and College of Marin and before her marriage was employed with the Aetna Life Insurance Co. in San Francisco.

She was honored at a shower given April 8 by Mrs. John S. Trotter at her home in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Frerichs will honor the couple at a reception before David again leaves for Vietnam in August.

Fred Enemarks Entertain—

Hosting the affair, to which 120 guests were invited, was the honoree's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Enemark of San Rafael. Major General Enemark, who returned from Germany where he was chief of staff with NATO in Heidelberg, attended a seminar at the Navy Management School in Del Monte. The party marked the first time the Enemarks had seen their sister-in-law, Trudie, in 12 years. The Major General is now a senior Army member with the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group in the Department of Defense in Washington. Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Lee Enemark of Novato.

Frick Hall, the setting for the birthday celebration, was ornamented with baskets of lilacs picked from the garden of Mrs. Thomas Watson, and arrangements of daffodils, narcissis and scilla and Belle of Portugal roses. A Madiera embroidered tablecloth and antique silver candelabra decorated the table which held the huge pink and yellow iced birthday cake. The honoree is a much loved person in the community who has been active in community affairs since moving to the county in the 1920s. She resides with her sister, Mrs. Angelo Duperu, who with another sister, Miss Elizabeth Phillips of San Francisco, poured for the more than 100 guests. Fortunately For The Gals— Patched Look 'In' For Summer

By EUNICE FARMER

I'm sure there are lots of gals who have my problem. Looking over my summer wardrobe, alas, I have found I've added inches in the wrong places.

GO TENTING
PRINTED PATTERN

Spend a swinging summer in a tent. That's what all the brightest girls are doing. Make yours of rose-splashed print or sizzling solids with bias-trim pocket detail.

Fifty cents in coins for each pattern — add 15 cents for each pattern for first-class mailing and special handling. Send to Anne Adams, care of Independent-Journal. Print NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, SIZE and STYLE NUMBER.

and I can't afford a new wardrobe.

What can I do to these clothes so they won't looked patched?
MRS. J. O.

DEAR MRS. J.O.:

Fortunately for you and many others, the patched look is in this year and your remodeled dresses may actually end up more attractive than they were originally.

Here are two ideas for you to play with, and I'll bet you'll be thinking of many clever ideas, too. Let me know what you come up with; you may win one of my Tailor Trix pressing boards!

Take a bold contrast in color and add a strip from the underarm to the hem at the sife seam. Since this strip should be an even width, you may have to take out more of the width of the dress itself at the underarm or else it would be too wide. It will look more complete if you also add a 3 or 5 inch strip around the hem of the dress.

Another simple idea would be to add a strip of contrasting fabric directly down the center of your dress, beginning with about 2 inches at the neckline and gradually ending up with 5 or 6 inches wide at the hemline. This could vary in width according to your own personal desires. I would suggest you add a bias binding to the neckline in the same contrasting color which again would tie the whole idea together.

For complete instructions on making those tiny, corded loops that are so popular today, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer and be sure to enclose 10 cents with your request. My leaflet called "Spaghetti Straps and Rope Belts" is especially helpful when making summer clothes.

Mrs. A. Hixson, St. Louis, Mo. is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestion.

I have found it economical, when cutting two garments from one piece of material or altering the cutting layout before buying fabric, to first lay out the pattern on a floor of linoleum squares. The squares are usually 9 inches which would make two tiles wide for 36-inch fabric laid on the fold or three squares for 54 inches. Often you can rearrange the pieces of the pattern so that you will need less material. This is especially helpful when considering a purchase of expensive fabric!

DEAR EUNICE:

I have a permanent pleated 100 per cent Dacron skirt that I would like to take apart, remove the pleats and cut a dress out of the fabric. Is it impossible to get these out of the skirt? I'm hoping you can help me. — Mrs. A.M.K.

DEAR MRS. A.M.K.

I'm afraid that I can't help you this time. Permanent pleated garments have been pleated with a special heat process to withstand almost any kind of treatment, and the word permanent usually means just that. If any of our readers have had any luck removing this permanent crease, please write to me so that I may help all of you who have written me.

DEAR EUNICE,

Please give a word of caution to your readers about those very new, attractive, square armholes that are so chic! These look great hanging on a hanger or pictured in a fashion magazine, but for those of us who have a little pad of fat at the underarm, they are bad news. Unfortunately, I just finished an evening gown without checking this out, now I can't relax when wearing the gown because I'm afraid I'll pop out at the armhole!

NOT LICKED—

Stamp Out Trading Stamps Campaign Finds Opposition

NEW YORK (AP) — Nothing has dropped so abruptly from the news as the housewives' revolt against trading stamps, which just six months ago had the fervor of a Carrie Nation crusade.

What is the cause? Is it simply the inevitable conclusion of a typically feminine outburst? Or is there a deeper meaning to be found in this silence?

SOME IRREVERENT critics suggest that a highly imaginative and effective public relations campaign by the stamp people might have had something to do with calming the irate housewife.

At any rate, the president of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs this week received the achievement award of the Trading Stamp Institute of America, the first woman so honored. Previous winners were merchants.

Said Geraldine V. Brown, the president, at the award dinner: "The Board of Directors of the New Jersey Federation thought so highly of the stamp industry that they went on record in the fall in favor of trading stamps."

"WE WENT ON RECORD in opposition to any bill which might come before the New Jersey State Legislature opposing their stamp distribution," she said.

Miss Brown was honored because, and was happy because, her organization's clubhouse was built largely through the redemption of trading stamps — on which four different stamp companies paid big bonuses.

The Trading Stamp Institute estimates that one half of the $125,000 needed to build the clubhouse, on the Rutgers University campus, came from stamps collected from members in hundreds of clubs throughout the state.

Various methods were used in computing the bonuses, but in the final analysis it shows that one company, for instance, redeemed 3,000 books of 1,500 stamps at $2 each although the regular redemption value was $.50. Another gave $2 for $1.20 books. And donations of time, effort and expense also were made.

THIS CAN BE VIEWED in two ways: as an overt play for favor or as a public service contribution.

The stamp industry prefers to view its public relations as public service or, as one of its service representatives puts it, "a charitable, philanthropic thing."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel E. Silva of Mill Valley, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Thomas Sherman of Santa Rosa, and the late Mr. Sherman.

When the bride was given in marriage by her father in the double ring ceremony she wore a full length gown of white silk linen having a Chantilly lace bodice and detachable lace train.

The maid of honor, her cousin, Jeanne Silva of Petaluma, wore a full length dress of hot pink silk linen with Empire waist. Gowned identically in soft pink were the bridesmaids, Marilyn Sherman of Santa Rosa, sister of the bridegroom, and Julie Armanino of Healdsburg.

Kenneth Kirkland was the ring bearer, and best man was James Devlin of Mill Valley. Ushers were Brian La Cousiere of San Francisco and Terrance Thomas of Fort Baker.

Bagley Declares Reagan Staff Complicating Legislative Work

By RICHARD LYTTLE

Some hard political facts out of Sacramento and some general political indictments out of University of California at Berkeley were put before members of the North Coast Counties Supervisors Association meeting in Tiburon yesterday.

Republican Assemblyman William T. Bagley of San Rafael told the supervisors that Ronald Reagan's Republican administration had made things difficult in the legislature.

AIDES BLAMED

"There has been no honeymoon," Bagley said. "Instead there has been political polarization." This he blamed on some of the younger men on Reagan's staff who are "bright in the intellectual sense, but less than bright in the legislative sense." He said they seemed a little too impressed with the million vote margin in the gubernatorial election.

"This has affected the ability of some of us to get our programs through," Bagley said.

The veteran assemblyman spoke in favor of the Veneman tax bill, authored by John G. Veneman, R-Stanislaus County, citing its merits over the governor's tax bill.

The Veneman bill includes a withholding tax plan which Bagley said is necessary to provide a proper cash flow of revenues in Sacramento.

"The governor has not helped much," Bagley said. "He keeps pounding on the table, saying he is against withholding."

Bagley said he believes Republicans may have oversold the anti-withholding arguments when former Gov. Edmund G. Brown proposed it.

SWITCH PREDICTED

"I'm not saying he (Reagan) is wrong," Bagley said. "He's certainly sincere." But the assemblyman predicted that the governor will be pleading for passage of the Veneman bill by June.

He said there is a cash flow shortage of $150 million and a deficit in next year's $5 billion budget of $450 million. The Veneman bill will cover these shortages and give some relief to the aged on property taxes, he said.

Bagley praised the atmosphere of economy that Reagan has brought to Sacramento, but warned that Democrats, still with a majority in both houses, could obstruct the tax measures to such an extent that the state might be forced to issue script. He doubted this would happen, but said the Democrats could restrict tax increases to a once-a-year basis so the governor would have to come back each year asking for special tax increases.

The university speaker was Allan Temko from the U.C. Center for Planning and Development Research who urged supervisors to recognize the various levels of problems, citing world-wide, national, regional and civic problems.

He said affluent areas are good at stopping things such as freeways through parks and webs of overhead power lines, such as those planned at Woodside, but positive achievements are usually due to an individual or group of individuals who care.

"The Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, an authentic dog, needlessly scarred the bay. It was a job that could have been reasonably done in 1885," he said. A similar bridge was proposed from San Mateo to Hayward, but there were protests which brought about a great bridge, he said.

Temko, whose talk ranged from the Vietnam War to air and water pollution and race riots, said that preservation of our resources and cleaning up messes that have occurred should become partisan issues, with each side trying to outdo the other.

Deputies Shifted

OPERA REVIEW

Long Evening With College Workshop

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Puccini's one-act opera, "Suor Angelica" and scenes from three contemporary operas presented last night by the College of Marin Opera Workshop had some very impressive musical and dramatic moments.

Despite the limitations of Olney Hall, convincing theatrical production was achieved, thanks to the cooperative efforts of musical director Larry Snyder and dramatic supervision of Elizabeth Berryhill of the Festival Theater and technical assistance from some of its members.

By far the most effective from every standpoint was "Sister Angelica," with Soprano Joan Smith turning in an extraordinarily beautiful performance in singing and acting in the title role. Both her singing and acting have matured greatly since we last heard her, so that this was her best work to date.

She also staged some of the other opera scenes and apparently has a many faceted talent.

The first part is not strong Puccini, but the work for 16 female voices as nuns was well suited to the workshop which has more young women than men. Costumes were authentic, having been provided by Dominican College.

Also rating high praise in the heavy contralto role of the old princess was Marie Goff, who had been a wildly funny comedienne as the bearded lady Baba in scenes from Stravinsky's "The Rake's Progress."

Others doing well were Carol Brumm as the abbess, Martha Ward as the monitor, Margaret Lee as the mistress of novices (her voice is worthy of a much bigger role) and Darlene Brock as Sister Genevieve.

In the scene from Copland's "The Tender Land," Leslie Retallick's lovely young soprano voice was the highlight in her role as the graduating school girl, Laurie, partly because it was the only one having a really lyrical melodic line. Adequate in the other roles were Sylvia Hyde, Patricia Young, Clay Roni, Brad Luz, Joseph Reade and Louis Santini.

First among make singers was bass George Baker, a guest artist, who was thoroughly Mephistophelian in "The Rake's Progress" as Nick Shadow, the devil in disguise, and hilarious as farmer Ike in the Mark Bucci farce "Sweet Betsy from Pike." In this Carol Brumm as the narrator, and Jackie Hall as Betsy also showed a flair for comedy.

Tenor Kenneth Rowlend, another guest, was handsome, convincing and dynamic in the title role of Tom Rakewell in "The Rake's Progress," in which John Graulich's looks and bass-baritone suited the part of Father Truelove.

Sharing the role of Anne Truelove were sopranos Sarah Forwood, who was more coquettish and Kay Collette, more wistful, but who could not be understood. This possibly was not entirely the latter's fault since Stravinsky's musical language does not always follow speech accents.

The program was too long and could have been shortened by elimination of the middle scene of "The Rake's Progress."

As always Larry Snyder and Phyllis Murphy with assistance from Tom Tidy provided skillful two-piano accompaniment.

The program will be given again tonight at 8 p.m. but with scenes from different contemporary operas.

The site of the Presidio of San Franciscos Crissy Army Air Field was selected by the late General of the Air Force, Henry H. (Hap) Arnold in 1919.

St. Isabella's 'Pinafore' Performances Sold Out

"H.M.S. Pinafore" still has plenty of crowd-drawing potential in its 90th year. All three scheduled performances of Gilbert and Sullivan's 1878 operetta by students of St. Isabella's School in Terra Linda have sold out, according to publicity director Joan G. Roberts.

Performances are scheduled at 8 p.m. April 28 and 29 and 2:30 p.m. April 30 at St. Isabella's Parish Center. Mrs. Roberts said another performance may be scheduled if ticket demand is great enough.

A cast of 130 children will perform in the operetta, directed by Sister Gilbert, O.P. Most of the lead roles are triple-cast and different students will played by Trail Wood at all three performances.

Other leads are Chris Hansen, Tom Cronin and John Cass, as the Captain; Katie McLaughlin, Lisa Doherty and Jeanne Schmidt, Buttercup; Patty MacMillan, Ellen Miller and Janet McNaught, Josephine; Robert Grahame, Marc Salvisberg and Jerry Miner, Dick Deadeye; Kerry Cahill and Bernie Bagshaw, Ralph; Louise Irish, Julie Franz and Patty Hartigan, Hebe.

$260 Radio Stolen

Theft of a $260 portable radio Wednesday from the unlocked car of Dr. Peter J. Gauder, 712 D Street, San Rafael, was reported Thursday by sheriff's officers. The vehicle was parked at Marin General Hospital.

Singer Places Second In Tests

Mezzo soprano Margery Tede of San Francisco, who has appeared as soloist at College of Marin and with the Marin Symphony, has placed second in the National Federation of Music Clubs' biennial young artist auditions for woman's voice in New York City.

Judges said the decision between the top finalists out of 10 from over the country was by a narrow margin.

As a result of the contest Miss Tede has received engagements for future performances.

Townhouse living provides more leisure time in which to enjoy the abundant life.

Garden, pool service and building maintenance are no longer YOUR CHORES. . . a hired man does this work (your share of this cost is a pittance) and you are completely free to really "live a little."

(In a Peacock Hill townhouse you are just 3 short blocks from the first tee at Peacock Gap Golf Course)

A very limited number of two and three bedroom homes of deluxe quality and design are available. Immediate occupancy . . . best financing.

JUST LISTED!

This showplace speaks eloquently of hospitality and unquestioned comfort with its excellent floor plan consisting of 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths, formal dining room, warm family room w/frpl., plus "ankle-sinking" pale green wall-to-wall carpeting, lovely drapes and a magnificent, over-all view of the San Francisco skyline, Belvedere Island & the Bay to make a "lighthouse keeper's daughter" envious! The whole home & setting would be a marvelous natural "habitat" for a family who makes a lovely home the center of their lives and activities, not just a "hat-catcher"! Better call us now if you're interested in this Reedlands beauty, as it is sure to find a new owner fast!

[illegible] compares [illegible] Norman Gilroy designed "cliff hanger" that offers an unchallenged view of the action on the Bay . . . or Sam's dock too, which can be pretty fascinating if you're a "people watcher"! It's a uniquely arranged multi-level, 4-bedroom, 2½-bath Redwood home with large view deck. Great for a "swingin'" party-giving, sophisticated family. Dock your boat below at Corinthian Yacht Club and join the "in" crowd on the hill! Substantial price reduction, so this will be "snapped up" by a shrewd sailor soon!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Heart Adjusts To Considerable Extent To Aid Leaking Valves

VAN DELLEN

The body does an excellent job of adjusting to adversity. When such adaptation occurs in a specific organ, the physician says the structure has compensated for the defect and is doing business as usual.

One the best examples is the behavior of the heart after the valves no longer close and open normally and, to offset the leakage, the organ enlarges. The larger heart muscle is capable of squeezing harder to force an adequate amount of blood beyond the narrowed or leaky valves.

SO LONG AS the pumping apparatus compensates for the defect, the victim is not bothered by the valvular abnormality. But there is a limit to how large the heart can become, and when the cardiac reserve is exhausted the structure begins to fail (decompensation). The pulse is rapid and body tissues become waterlogged (dropsy).

At first shortness of breath deveolps on exertion. Later difficulty in breathing is prominent, even at rest; and many victims must prop themselves up in bed with pillows to facilitate breathing.

IN THESE instances, the most helpful regimen includes rest, ocygen, a low salt diet, digitalis, and drugs that stimulate the kidneys (diuretics). Many of these individuals fluctuate between periods of compensation and decompensation, depending upon the care received. During the summer months air conditioning is beneficial.

Heart surgery among those with valve defects is usually recommended long before this stage is reached. The scarred valve is replaced with an artificial structure, and in a few instances three of the four heart valves have been replaced.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.

LEAVING HOSPITAL

Mrs. B.E. writes: Recently a physician told my husband that a hospital patient can get up, dress, and walk out whenever he thinks he is well. I say you must be released by the hospital or the doctor who is caring for you. What are the rules in this matter?

REPLY

A hospital is not a jail and if the patient wants to leave, the hospital asks him to sign a release which protects the institution against liability.

CRAMPS AFTER WALKING

Mrs. R. writes: Can a person have intermittent claudication anywhere but in the calves of the legs, such as in the ankles?

REPLY

Yes, as a variation of the more usual site in the calf of the leg. In this circulatory condition, the individual develops cramps in one leg or the other after walking a block or two. Angina is heart pain of a related condition.

FLATFOOT

Mrs. E.T. writes: My 16-year-old boy has flat feet. Have you any suggestions fort his problem?

REPLY

Consult an orthopedic surgeon, who will prescribe proper shoes and arch supports. For additional information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a leaflet on flat feet.

BLUSHING

C.E. writes: Is there a cure for turning red when I meet people I know? My doctor prescribed vitamin B but it has not helped.

REPLY

You neglected to state your age.

M.S.

Mrs. B.W. writes: Is multiple sclerosis related to allergy?

REPLY

The cause of multiple sclerosis is not known, but many authorities consider a disturbance in circulation a more likely origin, than allergy.

Today is Saturday, April 22, the 112th day of 1967 with 253 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full stage. The morning star is Mars. The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Born on this day in 1707 was British novelist Henry Fielding, best known for the novel "Tom Jones."

On this day in history:

In 1839, some 20,000 homesteaders massed along the border of the Oklahoma Territory, awaiting the signal that would start the Oklahoma land rush.

In 1898, Theodore Roosevelt resigned as assistant secretary of war to recruit members for his Rough Riders.

In 1964, the New York World's Fair was opened by President Johnson.

A thought for the day — American writer William Dean Howells once said: "They were Americans, and they knew how to worship a woman."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

Collegians Learn Some Good Tricks From Some Tough Hands

Jeff Rubens and Larry Rosler constructed some sobering hands for college students to play a few weeks ago in the annual Intercollegiate Bridge Championships. Their feeling was that optimism should be tempered by an occasional dash of cold water.

A PROBLEM

South's problem, after winning the first club trick, was to bring in the diamonds. If South led a low diamond, a defender would refuse the first diamond trick if he could. Then the rest of the diamonds would never come in.

Most declarers guarded themselves against this danger by leading the king of diamonds at the second trick.

South planned to continue the suit if an opponent refused the first diamond. Presumably, he could force out the ace of diamonds and get back with a club to run the rest of the suit.

Alas for the optimism of youth. The diamonds broke 5-1, and South made only three diamond tricks instead of five. Down one.

PARTIAL PROTECTION

South cannot protect himself against all possible 5-1 breaks, but he can and should protect himself against the singleton ace in the East hand. After winning the first club, South should lead a spade to dummy's king and return the jack of diamonds from dummy. When East is obliged to play the ace of diamonds South can play low and then bring in the rest of the suit.

TO AVOID BREAK

If East could play a low diamond, South would overtake with the queen of diamonds in the hope of finding a 3-3 of 4-2 break rather than a 5-1 break. South would lose if it turned out that West had the singleton ace of diamonds, but South cannot protect himself against all possible bad breaks, as we have noted.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ Q 10 8 4 3
♥ Q 10 9 7
♦ A
♣ K 7 5.

What do you say?

Answer: Bid three spades.

This jump shows strong support (at least Q-x-x-xx) for partner's suit, with 13 to 16 points counting distribution as well as high cards. In this case you count about 11 points in high cards, 1 point extra for the queen of partner's suit, 1 point extra for the fifth trump, and 3 points for the singleton. You have maximum value for your double raise.

Staid Old Church Hippie Center

By ROBERT STRAND

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — There's a Methodist church on the edge of downtown San Francisco's Tenderloin District that welcomes hippies and Hell's Angels.

The unusual setting for unchurchlike "happenings" is the result of a decision taken six years ago at Glide Memorial Church, formerly a staid old-line house of worship.

Glide's decision was to work with outcasts of all kinds in an attempt to stir up community action.

"We take the hot issues," says the Rev. Lewis Durham, executive director of the Glide Foundation, "the problems too controversial for other church organizations to handle."

In his view, big cities are stagnating. They are fragmented into groups cut off from each other, and the church itself is one of the alienated fragments.

The five staff ministers of Glide, aided by interns, set up "dialogues" with the city's isolated segments. The message to them is that they, too, are important members of the community.

"Then we tell them to get up and walk," says Durham, "and be responsible members of the community."

But being responsible, for Durham, doesn't necessarily mean conforming to all the behavior patterns of the San Francisco establishment.

Once the alienated become convinced, Durham says, "they can mobilize tremendous power to do things." In the eye of conservative Methodists, it's a tremendous power for small revolutions.

The result has been a long list of unique organizations in which Glide has been an important factor.

To name a few, there's Vanguard, a group of male prostitutes; Intersection, a center for artists; Citizens Alert, an organization accusing police of brutality; Gateway, a center for orientation of young adults just arrived in the city; Baker House, a half-way house for ex-convicts and addicts, and the Council on Religion and the Homosexual, an effort founded on the notion that homosexuals, too, need religion.

The effort has raised its share of controversy.

There was the time John Handy, an avant garde jazz band, provided the music for the Christmas morning service. And the time tourists from Mississippi found Negro comedian Dick Gregory giving the Sunday sermon and walked out.

A recent flap was over a 72-hour "happening" for hippies, called "the invisible circus" and planned for 500, with members of the Hell's Angels motorcycle gang scheduled as ushers for the Sabbath morning service.

The event was ruined by its own success, and Durham says, "it turned out to be our biggest mistake."

Five thousand people shouldered into the church, its halls and office. The hippies unexpectedly were joined by neighborhood prostitutes and dope peddlers.

The air was heavy with marijuana. Hippies thumped away on drums, sleepers filled the corners and at 2 a.m., the jammed sanctuary was jumping as never before.

"The situation was explosive, and we got scared," says Durham. The out-of-control crowd was "cooled" by hasty improvisation of some activities far away—at the ocean beach.

Durham's objective is not to win members for the church.

"The Gospel doesn't say a thing about getting them to be members," he says. "What we are concerned about is what happens in the lives of those people. We want them to become responsible people, and then if they want to become members, fine."

The Glide Foundation, which runs the church, was established in 1929 by an oil rich southern Methodist lady who had evangelized the winos in Sacramento after the gold rush.

Some shrewd trustees, made up of church hierarchy, mortgaged the church and an adjacent building in 1937 to buy a hotel. Eventually, they parlayed a modest trust into $6 million.

Now Glide is operating on an annual budget of $140,000 a year.

Muisc-Drama Is Scheduled For Festival

A choir selection has been changed for the Westminster Presbyterian Church's Festival of Arts on Pentecost, May 14, in Tiburon.

Instead of the opera "Susannah," the choir will perform the music-drama "Death of the Bishop of Brindisi" by Gian-Carlo Menotti.

The work is based on the children's crusade of 1212. It will include the voices of the children's choirs and two soloists, J. D. Nichols, bass-baritone and Holly Noble, mezzo soprano.

Two afternoon performances will be given in the sanctuary. The rear of the room will serve as the scenery for sound and action, with the pews in an unexpected arrangement.

Pope's Encyclical Being Lauded By World Church

NEW YORK (UPI)—The recent encyclical of Pope Paul VI "On the Development of Peoples" offers the prospect of "a united Christian social thinking on a broader range than ever before seemed possible," according to Rev. Paul Albrecht, executive secretary of the Department of Church and Society of the World Council of Churches.

Rev. Albrecht said he saw many parallels between the encyclical and the conclusions reached by the 1966 World Conference on Church and Society, which was organized by the World Council of Churches. These similarities included the vision of a new world order based on new possibilities and new roles for the poorer nations in world affairs, the Rev. Albrecht said.

Life, Death Borderline Is Becoming More Obscure

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press

As medical technology advances, the borderline between life and death becomes more obscure. And the question of what measures are justified in regarding transition between the two zones today troubles both doctors and theologians.

"With each advance in medical techniques, the problem grows more acute," says Rev. Dr. Charles W. Blaker, a Presbyterian theologian and academic dean of Branfon Hall, Atlanta, Ga.

The issue is pointed up in cases in which physical breathing can be maintained by artificial devices and drugs, sometimes for years, in incurable patients in comatose states.

How far should science go in such physical prolonging of "life?"

This is "an ever-present medical concern, now increasingly discussed in medical circles," writes an Amarillo, Tex., physician, Dr. Tom W. Duke.

At a national Methodist convocation on medicine and theology last week in Rochester, Minn., no definite answers were determined to fill all cases.

But Dr. Edward H. Rynearson of the Mayo Clinic drew extensive applause when he urged that hopelessly ill patients be allowed to "die with dignity" and in peace rather than merely prolonging their bodily breathing.

With modern clinical methods, biological life can often be maintained long after the brain has stopped functioning, leaving the body and lungs working without thought or consciousness.

This raises questions of just what constitutes life or death. Is the line crossed when the mind stops working, or the flesh?

Episcopal Canon Michael Hamilton of the National Cathedral, Washington, D.C., said in a recent sermon:

"I think we will have to revise our understanding about the nature of man to the extent that we avoid tying man's personal identity ultimately to his biological functions, but rather relate it to his consciousness.

In ancient Judeo-Christian tradition, physical existence was viewed as secondary to spiritual life, although both were considered intertwined, the sacred creations of God.

There is a "time for every matter under heaven: a time to be born and a time to die," says Ecclesiastes.

On a CBS television discussion of the issue some time ago, Dr. Eusebius Murphy, a member of the American Medical Association committee on medicine and religion, was asked if a doctor was "ethically bound" to maintain a patient's life "by all means at his disposal?"

FLYING SAUCER ON A LEASH

University of California Professor Paul Moller, 29, demonstrates his genuine flying saucer, which he says can be improved to be better than helicopters as the air-car of tomorrow. Since he is not a licensed pilot, federal regulations required him to stay below three-foot altitude and have the machine on a tether for his demonstration hop this week. (UPI Telephotos)

Marincello Water Plans Hearing Set

Directors of Marin Municipal Water District will hold a public hearing Monday at 1:30 p.m. at the district office, 220 Nellen Avenue, Corte Madera, on the district's proposed annexation of Marincello.

The district has announced it will charge Frouge Corp. $51,989 annexations fee, to be paid in $10,000 annual installments with 5 per cent interest on the unpaid balance.

The district has also decided to operate a sewage system for the new development.

At the same meeting, bids will be opened on relocation of water mains on East Blithedale Avenue, Mill Valley.

Plans for painting a new Mill Valley water tank on Edgewood Avenue will be reviewed before the district calls for bids.

Prowler Turns Out To Be A Raccoon

Maureen Meikle, 2032 Paradise Drive, reported to Tiburon Sheriff's Deputy Victor L. Carrara at 11:15 p.m. Thursday that she heard a prowler in the basement.

Deputy Carrara investigated and heard scuffling sounds, too. Suddenly, the "prowler," a good-sized raccoon, ran between the deputy's legs and disappeared out the door way.

Handcuff Fun Is Embarrassing

Accustomed as he is to fisticuffs, ex-boxer Leo (The Lion) Engelhard Jr., had to call on San Rafael police Thursday to get him out of a severe case of handicuffs.

He handcuffed the right wrist of a friend, John Patrick Collins, to a chair at Wilkins Hotel, San Rafael — and then remembered he didn't have a key to the cuffs.

When the police arrived to the rescue, they had to use a screwdriver to free the friend, as their keys didn't fit.

Said Leo the Lion: "I don't want it to get around I handcuffed him 'cause I'm afraid of the guy. It was all in fun really."

Hub Chamber Names Manager

Directors also decided to hire a part-time secretary to staff the chamber office from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Juan Confident Of Big Comeback

Ace right-hander Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants, off to the worst start of his illustrious career, will be out to regain his winning ways tomorrow against the Atlanta Braves in the first game of a doubleheader at Candlestick Park.

Marichal (0-3) seemed confident in the Giants' clubhouse last night after rain postponed the opener in a four-game series.

The game was delayed 18 minutes while the tarpaulin was rolled off the infield. After Mike McCormick held the Braves scoreless in the first inning, heavy drizzle halted proceedings.

After 45 minutes, the umpires postponed the game — the first rainout at Candlestick Park since 1965 and only the tenth for the Giants since they moved west in 1958.

The two teams played again this afternoon with Gaylord Perry (1-1) opposing Denny Lemaster (1-0). The series concludes tomorrow with Marichal and Ron Herbel (0-0) opposing Atlanta's Tony Cloninger (1-1) and Dick Kelley (0-1).

"I feel good," said Marichal, whose three-game losing streak equals the longest of his career. "I pitched pretty well against the Braves in Atlanta last week."

A two - run home run by Braves' catcher Joe Torre in the eighth inning was the big blow in pinning a 4-3 loss on Marichal, a 25-game winner in 1966.

"Juan will win his 20 games," declared Torre, "but he seemed to be throwing more breaking balls in Atlanta. He got one high to me in the eighth inning. When he's right, he doesn't do that."

Outfielder Hank Aaron, who went hitless against Marichal, didn't find anything wrong with the Giants' righthander:

"I wouldn't be too worried about Juan's slow start. Warren Spahn was always a slow starter."

The Giants, meanwhile, are happy some hits are beginning to fall.

Rookie outfielder Ken Henderson leads the club with 11 hits and Jim Hart's bat has come to life after a slow start with three hits in two games.

Warriors Struggle Against Long Odds

JACK HANLEY

Just Think: Mays Only Needs 172 More Homers

Willie Mays had just hit homer No. 1 of 1967 and No. 543 of his illustrious 16 years in the major leagues.

"Have you any idea what Willie is thinking about now as he is jogging around the bags?" asked one reporter of a fellow reporter in the press box of Atlanta Stadium.

"Not the slightest," was the reply.

"Willie is thinking 'just 172 more and I'll pass the big fellow.' "

The reporters thought Mays would enjoy their joking commentary on his first homer of the new baseball season. Sure enough, he did. Willie has a fine sense of humor.

Willie's Patience Will Be Tried

But for the next five years—and Willie expects to be playing in 1971 when he is 40-years-old—he is going to be reminded so many times of Babe Ruth's all-time homer mark of 714 that his patience will be sorely tried.

And if Mays ever gets real close to Ruth's 714 in the coming years, the pressure on the greatest right-hander home run hitter in baseball history is going to become almost unbearable.

"I'd have to give it a go if I'm close behind the Babe. Being No. 2 isn't bad at all when the guy ahead of you is Babe Ruth."

Mays once believed Ruth's record was beyond attainment. But after he passed all other home run hitters last season and pulled into the No. 2 slot, Mays no longer refers to Ruth's 714 as "impossible."

He's Really Great Under Pressure

Mays is one of the greatest pressure performers baseball has ever known. He never pointed to the bleacher seats as the Babe once did in calling a home run in Wrigley Field. But in the Astrodome last year Willie hit a comparable homer which everyone knew he was determined to hit after several screaming fouls into the left field seats.

Mays regards that Astrodome homer which tied the score in the ninth inning and enabled the Giants to win the game in the 10th as one of the greatest he ever hit because "I truly was trying for it."

The most difficult one for him was No. 512 last May 4 in Candlestick Park to break the National League record that Mel Ott held for two decades. It was the most difficult because two weeks elapsed between his memorable Astrodome homer and No.

Saves Homers For When They Count

"You seem to save your homers for the games that count," a reporter told Mays after No. 1 of 1967, reminding him that he didn't hit homers in the spring exhibitioners this season.

"I hit one in Arizona this spring," countered Mays who really wasn't trying for homers in the games that didn't count. And there was a reason for that.

COMBINED AP & UPI

As the National Basketball Association championship playoffs head into what could be the final game at Philadelphia tomorrow the San Francisco Warriors have a couple of things to mull over — shooting percentages and the loss of a steady, competent guard for next season.

Poker-faced guard Paul Neumann announced yesterday that he is quitting professional basketball to become freshman coach at Stanford University.

And the average talk is all about the long and short of it — Rick Barry's playoff leading 165-point total and the big shadow of the Philadelphia 76ers' Wilt Chamberlain, who is the top percentage shooter in the playoffs at 53.2 but ranks only seventh in total points with 62.

Tomorrow's game at Philadelphia will be televised by ABC and can be seen on Channel 7 at 11 a.m.

SATNFORD COACH

Neumann, who graduated from Stanford in 1959, will be taking a pay cut at Stanford but he apparently felt that he could not pass up the opportunity to start his coaching career under the Indians' long-time mentor Howie Delmar.

The calm guard, who came to the Warriors in a deal that sent Wilt to the 76ers, will call it quits with the Warriors at the end of current championship playoffs.

Barry, who has a tournament high of 55 points in the Warriors' only win, is shooting only 40 per cent. Wilt, who holds NBA single-game record of 100 points, explained the shooting in the playoffs affably.

FORGOT WILT

"My guards can't seem to locate me," he joked. "They forget old Wilt's even in the ball game. If Barry had my guards he probably wouldn't see the ball either. You know I didn't get one shot in the second half Thursday night. Not one."

The 76ers won that one, 122-108, at the Cow Palace to take a commanding 3-1 lead in the playoffs.

Those guards of Wilt's are doing the job. Hal Greer, with assists from Chamberlain, is averaging 30.3 points a game in the playoffs and sling-shooting Wally Jones is hitting at 50 per cent.

If the Warriors should win, the series would move to the Cow Palace for the sixth game at 8:30 p.m. Monday.

Marin Woman Wins Third Cal Title

Mrs. Lyle Bowman of Terra Linda is still at it.

The 41-year-old mother of two girls won her third straight California Women's golf title yesterday by downing Marie Strand of San Bruno, 8 and 5, at the El Caballero Country Club in Tarzana.

A professional for a brief time in 1954 and 1955, Mrs. Bowman has not played a heavy competitive schedule in the last two years, but that hasn't stopped her from dominating the last three state tournaments.

Mrs. Bowman first won the title in 1965 by upsetting the then defending champion Mrs. Lew Gilliam in the finals. She defended her title successfully in 1966 and now has her third title.

It's getting to be a habit.

Sam Posey of Sharon, Conn., paced 21 drivers yesterday with a lap time of 1:36.1 or 112.32 miles an hour over the three-mile course.

SSkip Scott of Devon, Pa., was second in 1:37.0 or 111.34 m.p.h., and Peter Revson of New York third in 1:38.1 or 110.00 m.p.h.

Clay May Lose His Title

NEW YORK (AP) — If Cassius Clay refuses to go into the Army, he might lose, along with his freedom, his heavyweight boxing championship.

Several top boxing officials told the Associated Press yesterday that if Clay were to be jailed for refusing to be drafted, they would recommend that he be stripped of the title and that an elimination competition be held to determine a successor.

Clay is scheduled for induction at Houston April 28, but the champion says that, though he will showup as ordered, he will not take the oath of induction.

Army officials said in Washington that if Clay refuses to take a step forward when his name is called for inducion, he is subject to federal prosecution and a possible five-year jail term plus a $10,000 fine.

Clay has refused to go into the Army, contending he is a minister of the Black Muslim Negro sect.

Eddie Dooley, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission said yesterday, "We definitely will strip him of his title" if Clay is jailed.

"If that happens," said Dooley, "we will take six or eight of the world's leading heavyweights and let them fight it out."

Other world boxing organizations, including the World Boxing Association, the British Boxing Board of Control and the European Boxing Association, have hinted they might take similar action.

Robert Evans, president of the WBA said, "If Clay were to go to jail for five years as reported, we would have to take some kind of action. Knowing Clay as an individual, he will probably change his mind 14 times."

Among the possible contenders for an elimination series listed by Dooley were Floyd Patterson, George Chuvalo, Ernie Terrell, Zora Folley, Thad Spencer, Joe Frazier, Henry Cooper and Karl Mildernberger.

Huffaker Will Miss '500'; Liston Banned In England

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the first time in five years, sports car manufacturing whiz Joe Huffaker of Novato will not have an entry at the Indianapolis 500.

However, no less than five Huffaker built cars will be on the scene, three of the old liquid suspension variety under outside sponsorships and two Chevy - powered rear - engine front wheel drive cars entered and built for Mickey Thompson.

Flooding on his company property, a late start on building a possible entry for this year, and having to rebuild one of the Thompson cars after a racing wreck forced Huffaker to forego plans for this year.

"We got started too late so we just decided to forget it this year," Huffaker said. "But we'll have one again next year."

BASEBALL RAINED OUT

Drake Mermen Win Again

Rain and mud puddles postponed Marin County Athletic League outdoor sports activities yesterday and that's getting to be a habit.

But the big MCAL swimming showdown is all over as Drake High School's mighty Pirates splashed to a 54-41 triumph over the Terra Linda Trojans in the losers' pool.

And the fearsome Pirate foursome of Bob Girvin, Paul Sagues, Ben Edmonds and John Skaer led the way again.

Sagues shattered his own school record in the 50-yard free style with a 23.0 clocking, as the Drake mermen floated into sole possession of the league lead with an unblemished 5-0 record, while Terra Linda dropped into second. Sagues, Girvin and Edmonds each were double winners.

The Trojan B team downed its Drake counterpart, 74-41.

Yesterday's other swimming action saw Tamalpais (3-2) dunk Novato 74½-20½, the Novato "Bees" prevailing 52½-42½ at Tamalpais while Redwood emerged victorious at San Rafael in both varsity and Class B divisions, the Redwood "Bees" increasing their league-leading record to 5-0.

On the marred portion of the league slate, three baseball games, Novato at Drake, Terra Linda at Redwood and Tamalpais vs. San Rafael at Albert Field were postponed due to rain and muddy fields.

Drake has rescheduled its encounter with Novato for Wednesday, May 3, the same make-up date pending for the Redwood vs. Terra Linda scrap.

The Redwood Giants' of coach Al Endriss, who did not play at all this week, hope to go against Marin Catholic next Tuesday, Tamalpais next Wednesday and

HEADING FOR THE GRAND PRIX

Ed Meagor of San Rafael pushes his Ossa 175cc racer to the limit as he corners in a recent American Federation of Motorcyclists road race. Meagor will be riding Sunday as the AFM presents grand prix cycle racing to Vaca Valley Raceways four miles north of Vacaville on Interstate Freeway 80. The first race begins at 1 p.m. with a full program of production, grand prix and sidecar events planned for the afternoon.

N. L. Flash: Dodgers Rained Out

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was almost as if the heavens opened in mercy over Chavez Ravine.

Buried in ninth place with five losses in their first seven games, the National League champion Los Angeles Dodgers could be excused if they approached their four-game series with red hot St. Louis somewhat less than enthusiastically.

After all, the first place Cardinals had won six of their first seven games and had fireballing Bob Gibson, 2-0, set to open against the punchless Dodgers last night.

About the only thing Los Angeles could hope for was a miracle. . .like maybe rain in California.

Now any native will tell you that rain in California is about as rare as snow in Florida. The Dodgers hadn't lost an inning to the elements in nine years since moving from that nasty Brooklyn climate. They'd played 737 consecutive games at home including exhibitions and World Series.

But last night, it rained in Los Angeles, and the Dodgers didn't have to play the Cardinals.

Not only did the weather keep the Dodgers idle, but it moved up the California coast and wiped out the San Francisco Giants' game against Atlanta.

That kept the Giants, 2-7, in last place, one game back of the Dodgers, and five off the pace of the Cardinals.

Three National League games were played yesterday. Vada Pinson's 10th inning triple drove in two runs as Cincinnati trimmed Houston 3-1. The New York Mets broke Jim Bunning's hex against them, downing Philadelphia 6-3, and Bob Veale's two-hitter gave Pittsburgh a 6-1 victory over Chicago.

The Cardinals and Dodgers were scheduled to try again tonight, with Gibson set to go against Los Angeles' Don Drysdale.

Pinson was the Reds' hero for the second straight night as Cincinnati played its third consecutive extra inning game.

His triple drove in Art Shamsky, who had walked and Tommy Harper, who had singled. It was Pinson, who stroked a single in the 13th inning Thursday night to beat the Dodgers.

Bunning brought a 13-2 lifetime record into the game against the Mets and had an 8-0 record against them in New York.

But the Mets strafed him for seven hits including four doubles in a five-run second inning and got strong pitching from Jack Fisher and Don Shaw for their third straight victory.

Bill Mazeroski and Gene Alley, the Pirates' second-base-shortstop combination, socked consecutive homers against the Cubs in the second inning, igniting Pittsburgh's victory.

Veale became the first Pirate pitcher to go the route. One of the two hits he allowed was a homer by Adolpho Phillips, accounting for Chicago's only run.

Drake Mermen Triumph

Burlingame High School Friday. San Rafael hopes to meet Terra Linda next Tuesday, at San Rafael; then play a makeup with Novato Wednesday, at Novato, and face Marin Catholic next Friday, at Albert Field, assuming the San Rafael "swamp" is fit to play on at that time.

Tuesday, May 2, the Bulldog horsehiders will attempt to squeeze in a game with Redwood, at Redwood; and make up yesterday's rain-out with Tamalpais the following day, May 3, at Albert Field.

Meanwhile, Terra Linda vs. San Rafael in track competition also was postponed yesterday, as was Marin Catholic at Novato, the former meet not yet rescheduled and the latter set for next Tuesday (it will be a triangular meet, scored on a dual meet basis, involving Drake).

Hits Two Home Runs, But Only One Counts

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Tony Oliva hit his first home run twice and he made sure the second one counted.

The Minnesota outfielder hit a long blast in the third inning of the Twins' 12-4 loss to Detroit last night and was happily romping around the bases when — what's this? — he ran right past Cesar Tovar, who for reasons best known to himself, had stopped between first and second. Oliva was out.

But in the ninth, after a 58-minute rain delay, Tony hit a towering shot into the third deck in right field. He knew this one would be good because he was the leadoff batter.

Though it was clear than Oliva had to be called out for passing Tovar, it took some searching of the rule book to clear up the rest of the situation.

Umpire John Stevens allowed Tovar to score, ruling that all he had to do was touch all the bases. Official scorer George Cantor reasoned that since Oliva did get to first base, he should get a single and a run batted-in. And there, unless somebody dusts off another rule, the matter rests.

In other American League games, Boston beat New York 6-1, California edged Cleveland 6-5, Washington nudged Chicago 4-3 and Kansas City took Baltimore 3-1.

Detroit scored seven times in the fourth inning, three runs coming on a homer by Jim Northrup. Al Kaline and Ray Oyler drove in two runs each for the Tigers, and Denny McLain was the winning pitcher.

Bill Rohr went the distance against the Yankees again, the only run off him coming when Elston Howard singled in Bill Robinson in the eighth. Howard spoiled Rohr's no-hit bid with a two-out single in the ninth a week ago. Dalton Jones homered for the Red Sox.

Jim Fregosi homered with two out in the ninth, also driving in pinch runner Don Wallace and giving the Angels their victory. Cleveland had gone ahead in the eighth on doubles by Leon Wagner and Duke Sims. Chuck Hinton and Fred Whitfield homered for the Indians.

Ken Harrelson's bases-loaded, two-out single in the ninth drove in Washington's winning runs. Pete Ward hit his third homer for the Sox and Tommie Agee also homered.

Five doubles and Jim Gosger's homer led the Athletics to victory. Jim (Catfish) Hunter held the Orioles to four hits and struck out eight before getting relief help from Jack Aker in the ninth.

Bait Outscores Artificials In Bethel Island Bass Derby

STEVENS

The competitive appeal of bass derbies seems to gain strength each season. A release from the Bethel Island Chamber of Commerce reads, "The Bethel Island Bass Derby was an outstanding success in spite of rain on Saturday. More than twice the number of bass were caught and weighed in this year than were weighed in last year."

There were 100 prizes awarded, with Neno Crivello of Pittsburg copping the grand prize, a brand new Mercury outboard motor. Neno's winner weighed 32½ pounds and was ciaght on sardine bait in False Tract by sardine bait in False River. Next in line was a 27-pound, 8-ounce bass caught in Frank's Tract by Robert S. Muramoto of Mountain View. It was taken while trolling. It is interesting to note that of the 100 winners in the derby, 33 used artificials, while 67 fell to the old standby, bait.

THERE WAS one minor tragedy: John Nance came to the weighing station with a 36-pound striper which would have won the outboard motor. Only trouble was that John caught his lunker after the deadline of 5 p.m.

THIS WEEKEND the famous Rio Vista Bass Derby will get under way and, according to information received, if no gale-force winds hit the area comprising the limits of the official waters, prospects look very good. Fishing will be restricted to the Sacramento River from Snug Harbor on the north to the second tower below Buoy 24, and includes Cache Slough, Steamboat Slough, Horseshoe Bend off Decker Island.

IN KEEPING with my policy to mention anything in the way of fishing aids that is new on the market, perhaps now would be a good time to report that the "Glow Tape" may now be obtained. Should either or both Rio Vista Derby days be dark with overcast, the anglers who have a strip or two of this Glow Tape stuck on a lure may have the edge over anglers who use plain lures when trolling.

I UNDERSTAND that Glow Tape is easily used. When the tape comes to you, merely remove the backing; cut it into any shape to be pasted on your lure. Then hold the taped lure directly in the rays of a flash light or an electric bulb. When you hold the taped lure in a darkened room, you will note the glow it gives off. If you are interested, send $2 to GLOW, 45 South Third Avenue, Mount Vernon, N.Y. 10550.

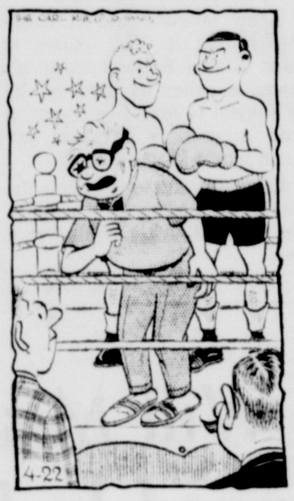
Five Lost Minutes

PALM BEACH GARDEN, Fla. (UPI) — Under present rules, golfers are permitted five minutes to look for balls before they are deemed lost.

BIFF BUFF



"Both of 'em are Tam graduates and they've found out I went to San Rafael."

115 Report To Cal's Grid Drills

A turnout of 115 is expected including 22 transfers to augment 44 advancing from last fall's freshman team.

Twenty-one lettermen are back but six will forego the spring practice either because of participation in track or because of injuries.

Quarterback Barry Bronk is among the injured, suffering from a shoulder ailment.

Willsey has called practices for Monday through Thursday each week, and perhaps on Saturday. The annual Varsity-Alumni game will be played on May 13.

Willsey searches especially for a split end to replace the graduated Jerry Bradley, a back-up quarterback for the junior Bronk and some running backs.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

Compromise Is Key To Redwood Park Solution

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Congressman Clausen is concerned about the chances of getting California sufficient funds to proceed with the acquisition of lands yet to be taken into the Pt. Reyes National Seashore.

So as to keep the matter before Congress, he has included in his Redwood National Park and Seashore bill (H.R. 7742) a provision to authorize additional funds for Pt. Reyes.

Sen. Alan Bible's Subcommittee on Parks and Recreation is not enthusiastic about voting more Pt. Reyes purchase money right now.

He cites the original estimates of funds needed to buy the land for the park and he cites the vastly higher present estimates for completing acquisition.

ACCORDING TO Senator Bible, our Marin County supervisors and planners are responsible for the steep rise.

Further, according to Senator Bible, our Marin supervisors and planners hold the key to a solution to the problem.

The solution is simple. Rezone the property, placing upon it restrictions to limit its use to agriculture.

It would thereafter have no potential value for subdivision or commercial development.

The government could buy it cheap perhaps for $260 per acre instead of $2,000 per acre.

Incredible?

In the hearing rooms of the august United States Senate nothing seems incredible.

The genius of the founding fathers fortunately provided a system of checks and balances. It's a good bet that the courts of our land would never let our government get away with any such violation of our constitutional guarantee of just compensation for property taken.

As a matter of practical fact, the longer Senator Bible's subcommittee drags its feet on providing funds to complete Pt. Reyes acquisition, the more it will cost us taxpayers in the end.

Sen. Tom Kuchel, who will seek reelection from Calfiornia next year, is a member of Senator Bible's subcommittee.

It is to be hoped that Tom Kuchel sees the light on this matter—and is able to show it to Senator Bible and his colleagues.

HEARINGS THIS WEEK on Redwood National Park bills were outwardly inconclusive.

Congressman Jeffery Cohelan was on hand to pitch for a scaled-down version of the huge package sought by the Sierra Club.

Senator Kuchel's bill embodying administration proposals was examined.

Conservation groups were represented by a myriad of spokesmen.

The lumber industry's position was thoroughly explained.

Nobody said anything new or surprising publicly at the hearings.

OUTWARDLY there was no apparent sign of solution to the wide differences that separate the varying points of view.

Behind the scenes, it's different.

The lumber industry—once bitterly opposed to any suggestion for public acquisition of any additional park lands—now privately displays signs of cooperation.

Senator Kuchel and the Reagan Administration both earnestly want to avoid a public split with political overtones when an election year is just ahead. They will compromsie.

Congressman Clausen?

He seems to see the handwriting on the wall and appears receptive to compromise.

TAKE THE BEST features of the Clausen plan (calling for seashore acquisition and preservation of the very finest stands of redwood giants closest to the coast) and add some upland watershed lands as provided by the administration plan (espoused by Senator Kuchel).

Toss in a couple of areas which the Sierra Club regards as essential above all else.

Put these three elements together and you can pretty well guess what shape a new Redwood National Park will ultimately take.

Many problems remain to be solved; many questions remain to be answered.

MOTORIST HELPS PLANE LAND SAFELY

A quick-thinking motorist provided enough light for a pilot's forced landing in a Wisconsin farmer's hayfield last winter.

While driving his car along a country road near LeRoy, Wis., the motorist spotted a low-flying single engine plane circling in the dark during a snowstorm, trying to find a place to land.

Swinging his car into a farmer's hayfield, the driver managed to illuminate the field and guide the small aircraft to a safe landing.

The pilot was low on fuel and having visibility trouble due to the heavy snow.

Countless opportunities are open to all of us to be of service to others. Why do we miss so many of them? Can it be because we are often too preoccupied with our own personal affairs?

Deepen your concern for your fellowmen. Realize they are your brothers and sisters—children of your Father in heaven. Then you are more likely to look out for occasions to advance their best interests.

"Have we not all one Father?"
(Malachi 2:10)

Let me learn, Lord, to find true self-fulfillment by enriching the lives of others.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Theology Student Questions Column

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I am a first-year theology student here at the seminary in San Anselmo. I have also worked as a reporter and feature writer for a small-town newspaper, and it is for the latter reason mainly that I was highly disturbed by Theron Newell's thoughtless remarks on last week's execution at San Quentin (Reporter's Notebook—April 18).

Whereas I was not among "the swill in front of the gate to protest the carrying out of justice" and do not lead toward puerile forms of activism, I am still embarrassed that any journalist would have the conscience to unbar such a spate of caricature and abuse. Surely every newsman has a right to be heard, but when his copy secretes more venom than enlightenment as to the facts, he should perhaps reappraise his responsibility to his readers. Mr. Newell's attempt to link the use of LSD with overcrowding in the state's hospital was not only ungermane, but base and misleading.

Finally, I would say that anyone endorsing the proclamation of "liberty throughout the land" or "the risen Christ," while lauding "the 10,000-year-old law of the human race of an eye for an eye," neither understands American legality well enough to intelligently defend it, nor remembers the Gospel precept about turning the other cheek. Perhaps he would prefer to address himself to the Late Stone Age.

Newell Makes Grave Errors

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I feel compelled to comment upon Theron Newell's Reporter's Notebook on April 8. He makes unforgiveable errors which must be corrected. Phil Drath did not take blood blood plasma to North Vietnam. A little knowledge and less emotional opinion would have confirmed the fact that he took antibiotics, antimalaria shots, vitamins, and burn-remedies to aid the civilians in a gesture to prove man's brotherhood.

Again, knowledge of the actual vigil at San Quentin would have prevented him from making such ignorant statements. The protestors were not all hippies. The paper neglected to show pictures of the ministers, the businessmen, and the grammar school children who believe not in Moses' law of "eye for an eye" but in Jesus', refuting this, and saying "turn the other cheek." Business Image And Today's Youth

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your editorial of Saturday, April 15 concerning youth's need for new insight into our free enterprise economy was most appreciated.

The lack of appreciation, not to mention lack of basic understanding, of a free enterprise, capitalistic system by youth and young adults has long been a concern to me. We are living in a time when it is the vogue to depreciate and criticise the basic economic and political systems that are the source of our present strength and our hopes for achieving a greater future. Yet, the impression one gets from reading and listening to the frequent, non-constructive attacks on our economic system is that few of the critics have any but the sketchiest idea of what our free enterprise system really is.

As you have pointed out, the Junior Achievement Program is one excellent and practical way for youth to find out what it is all about. But what of the other young people who may not be involved directly in a business situation? They will nevertheless be voters and a part of our economic system. Shouldn't they, also, know how it ticks?

It is my impression that our schools are not giving the kind of background and understanding of our free enterprise system that will prepare them for their life as responsible voting citizen. We should also teach in our schools the basic of other current economic systems in use in the world. But how is a young American able to intelligently evaluate other systems about which he is constantly reading and hearing so much fact and fiction if he doesn't know that basics of our own American brand of capitalism?

You are right in that the business community has failed in "putting across the right image". However, this misses the point in that it is not only the business community that should be concerned but, also, the professional community, the educational community, the labor community, in short, everyone.

Brindel Challenges Drath's Viewpoint

Editor, Independent-Journal:

. . . Quaker Phil Drath is obviously ignorant of history, or was "brain-washed." It was Catholic President Kennedy who did nothing to save President Diem in 1963. Let Drath read "The Ambassador" by Morris West; "Diem of Vietnam" by Bouscaren; or "Mission In Torment" by John Mecklin.

James II, last Catholic king of England, Scotland and Ireland was the first to give Quakers religious freedom. Quaker Pennsylvania was the first colony to permit a Jesuit church in 1733. Had Quaker Richard Nixon listened to President Eisenhower and encouraged our "Catholics For Nixon," he would not have been defeated by 112,702 votes out of 68,770,294 in 1960.

Let Phil Drath visit Western NORAD headquarters at Hamilton AFB and see the magnificent work of the chaplains of Cardinal Spellman's Military Vicariate. Drath might have a "security" problem but some Quaker chaplain could vouch for him. A copy of your April 12 Drath "sound-off" and this letter has been sent to Cardinal Spellman, to our San Francisco Catholic Monitor . . .

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

AN UNSIGNED advertisement in the Rocky Mountain Herald marks the advent of a brand new automobile that should give General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler pause. It's to be called the "Rumpbuster 9" and is described as "the functional sports car for functional people," with "special extra-high wheelbase to enable you to pass completely over most other sports cars."

ONE OF the West Coast's most publicized glamour pusses was decidedly put out when a motorcycle cop motioned her to the side of Sunset Boulevard the other evening. "I know perfectly well I'm driving on the wrong side of the road," she pouted, "but the other side is full."

Adenauer's Accomplishments: Still Too Soon For Judgement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Konrad Adenauer was a combination cement-mixer, architect, and teacher for the new West Germany. Even at the age of 87 he didn't want to retire. But he was forced to.

He was too iron-willed, some would say too bull-headed, to be universally loved. It wasn't that his country didn't appreciate what he had done. It just thought it was time he left.

THE SAME THING had happened to one of his great contemporaries, Sir Winston Churchill, some years before in Britain. But at that time Churchill was physically deteriorating. Adenauer didn't seem to be. He had just outlived his time.

When West Germany he took over in 1949 as chancellor, at age 73, was still pretty much a rubble from the war. He held the job 14 years and in that time guided his country into a miracle of prosperity and a new way of life.

He had to lay the foundations for the new West Germany and build it by design into a new European power. He allied it with the West, making it one of the pillars of the Allies.

BUT PERHAPS his greatest contribution was in steering the West German people in a democratic direction after their long history of authoritarianism. If West Germany stays on that road, he will be one of the great figures of its history.

If not, he will simply have been a stopgap leader who happened to appear during an interval between dictatorships.

So, if the obituaries about him seem a little guarded, there is good reason: Since the future of West Germany is uncertain it is too soon to say whether what Adenauer did was all for nothing or was a glittering achievement.

HE PREACHED democrary but at times seemed so authoritarian himself in his impatience with opposition that, while he may have been revered and trusted, he was not particularly popular.

West Germany probably needed an iron-willed man at the time Adenauer took over. Then it was surrounded and suspected by its wartime enemies. It might have melted into chaos under a weaker man.

Yet, there were odd twists in his career which almost made his ascendancy look accidental He had been mayor of Cologne from 1917 until 1933, when Hitler threw him out for ordering Nazi posters torn down. He was in eclipse during the war. After it he became mayor again. Then the British threw him out.

THIS ENABLED him to devote all his energies to becoming chancellor. After the war he had helped create the Christian Democratic Union and became its leader. It was a kind of mass party, drawing support from all classes.

When his CDU won a narrow plurality in the 1949 election he formed a center-right coalition in the first Bonn Parliament. Then came the big test of his big ambition and he didn't win by much.

His election as chancellor of the new government in 1949 was by one vote in the 402-seat Parliament.

Five days after his election he laid down a view and a policy which he followed for the rest of his time in office.

HE SAID there could be no peace in Europe until Germany was reunited (a hope that hasn't been realized yet although he persisted in it), that there must be an end to French-German hostility, that West Germany "belongs to eastern Europe," and he linked west Germany's fate with that the United States.

For several years before he stepped down in 1963, against his will, there had been growing dissension about his leadership within his party. Finally, his party dictated his departure.

HE LIVED four years after that and was 91 when he died Wednesday.

Die-Hards Battling Dixie School Order

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

There seems to be little that can be done to save Southern extremists from their suicidal rush to defy federal laws and the conscience of the nation. In the face of growing awareness by Southern moderates that they must speak out and lead their region to a prosperous future marked by racial peace, the die-hards cling to their dreams of a racist past and, clutching the Confederate flag, prepare for their ultimate defeat.

THE LATEST gesture of defiance comes from the governor of Alabama, Mrs. Lurleen Wallace, wife of former Gov. George Wallace. She recently addressed the state legislature and proposed that Alabama's schools be turned over to her control to avoid compliance with a federal court order desegregating them. To back up her threats, she talked of enlarging the state police force.

The winds of change are swirling through the South, but Mrs. Wallace refuses to come out and feel the breeze. Southern-style segregation is doomed and demagogic appeals to defy federal and judicial authority will only be met with counter-force. Most responsible leaders in the South have read the handwriting on the wall and are preparing to lead the South back into the Union. Alabama cannot stand alone in defiance of the United States Constitution.

A RECENT REPORT issued by the Southern Educational Reporting Service documents some of the progress which has been made. Last year only 6 per cent of Negro schoolchildren in the South were attending school with white youngsters. Now, 16 per cent of the 3 million Negro students in the region attend desegregated schools.

Of course, this is far from a satisfactory number, but the strides taken in the past year have been rapid. The figures would be higher but for the intransigence of Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama, where less than 3 per cent of Negro students attend schools with white children.

An indication of the need for progress here is the fact that more Negro students are enrolled in all-Negro schools than in 1954, when the Supreme Court handed down its school desegregation decision.

The U. S. Office of Education is trying to help Southern school districts comply with the law by setting guidelines which measure progress in desegregating the schools. The court decision which so enraged Alabama's governor upheld these guidelines and left no doubt that the federal courts will tolerate nothing short of full compliance.

MANY SOUTHERN districts would like to do away with the guidelines and replace them with "freedom of choice" in which Negro parents could "choose" to have their children attend white schools. We all know that such a "free choice" often ends in beatings or firing from a man's job.

I only hope that an ugly confrontation can be avoided for it can only make a serious situation more tense and encourage racist die-hards to flout the law.

I CAN'T HELP wondering why some people in high office in the South go on in their "lost cause" when the only outcome of their illegal behavior is to weaken local government and bring about the very federal activities they profess to fear.

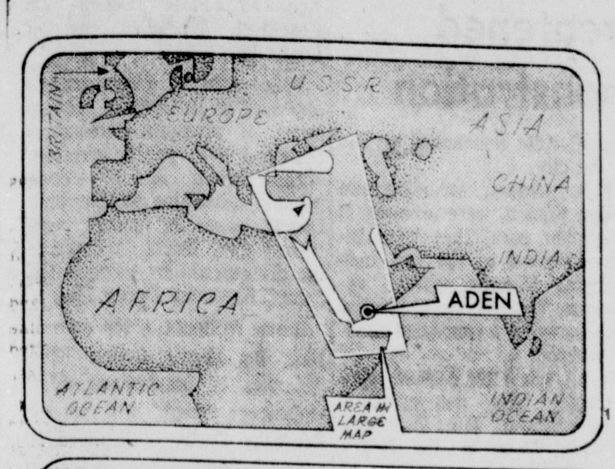
Aden Becoming Mid-East's Time Bomb



By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

The situation in Aden has such an ugly look that it may eventually lead the United States and the Soviet Union to act in concert to prevent a new and dangerous blowup which could involve a large area of the Middle East.

A complicated struggle marked by brutal terrorism is going on in the port city in advance of a British pullout and prospective independence.

Once again, as in so many Arab East upheavals, there is evidence of the hand of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic. Aden, commanding access to the Red Sea, the Arabian Sea and the Indian Ocean, would be a rich prize to anyone seeking enhanced influence in an area rich in oil resources.

The British say Nasser backs a terror organization called "Front for Liberation of Occupied South Yemen (FLOSY.)" Its leadership is based in the Yemen, where Nasser now has 50,000 Egyptian troops bogged down watching an interminable civil war.

There is also a rival terrorist group called the National Liberation Front (NLF), but FLOSY insists on all the credit for the terror now reigning in the area scheduled to become an independent South Arabia Federation, with Aden at the center of a group of 17 sheikhdoms and sultanates.

FLOSY's secretary-general is Abdal-Qawi Makawee, former chief minister of the Aden Colonial government which was dissolved last year. He has been directing violence from Yemen. The head of its political bureau is one Abdullah Al Asnag, who claims for FLOSY all the credit for the violence. The "commanding officer" is Abdallah Majali. The organization itself is reported to be tiny, but its terrorism has been potent.

The trouble with the Aden situation is that it could be a curtain raiser for something much bigger and more dangerous. It could become a new cold war arena, should it develop into a contest for influence between the two great powers, the United States and the Soviet Union.

For the Russians, interest in South Arabia would be a matter of military logistics and of the old Russian quest for warm water ports. For the Americans, it would be a matter of protecting U. S. interests in the free flow of Middle East oil to the west.

Yet the interests of neither are important enough at this moment to warrant the risk of a new Soviet-American confrontation. Both Moscow and Washington have reasons for wanting to keep the lid on. Neither would welcome general chaos in the Arabian Peninsula which might even spill over to the African continent.

Britain has made it plain she wants to get out completely. The British have a garrison of 14,000 in the federation, but London wants to withdraw them and has no plans for leaving behind a defense arrangement for the newly independent federation. The British ran Aden as a military base for 127 years and administered the surrounding area as a protectorate.

That seems to leave it up to the big powers and the United Nations.

Recently, in a sudden and unexpected move, the Kremlin sent Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to Cairo. Unquestionably he was there to talk about events in the Arabian peninsula. Moscow is in a position to apply pressure on Nasser, who now is becoming dependent on the Russians for more than just the upkeep of his military equipment. He also needs Soviet wheat.

Many Britons claim to be convinced that Nasser has it within his power to call off the terrorism. Some speculate that there is a good chance the Russians will persuade Nasser that it is to his interest in the long run to cooperate with a U. N. mission assigned to try to straighten out the federation's tangled politics and reach some form of compromise before the independence deadline.

No date has been announced for Britain's withdrawal from Aden, but official statements have indicated that it will be by 1968 or sooner.

School Unification Plans Are Stilled

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The 1967 session of the legislature is moving on but there is no clear picture yet as to what will happen in the controversial area of school district unification, if anything.

Governor Ronald Reagan made quite a point during his campaign about removing the nearly compulsory unification features of the present law. He has not changed his mind and, in fact, has a bill introduced in the senate by Sen. Clair W. Burgener, R-San Diego, to carry out his plans.

But in the assembly, Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood, father of the main unification bill of 1964, is not ready to make many changes. Unruh has a bill in on unification, AB272, which would relax the present law but not so you would notice it very much.

Elsewhere there are bills running all the way from an outright repealer of the 1964 law to those softening the process at various levels.

Meanwhile, some school districts which normally would have been required to hold second unification elections this year — under the 1964 law requiring a vote every two years if unification is unsuccessful — are not holding them.

Most are acting under county counsel's opinion that the two-year cycle did not start until July 1, 1966. Under this reasoning, which is not shared by the attorney general, districts with unsuccessful elections held in 1964 and 1965 could wait until July 1, 1968 for the next election.

The bill that has moved the furthest at this time is SB40 by Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, which would require second elections only each five years. This bill has been approved by the senate education committee.

"These elections every two years just heat up the electorate," Collier said. "They get unhappy about unification and then, when other things like bond issues or override taxes come along, they vote against them too."

In the assembly, a subcommittee of the education has heard all of the bills on unification and taken them under submission. Just when the sub-committee will report is not known.

It's logical assumption that, in the assembly committee, there will be sympathy for AB272 of Unruh's and AB243 by Assemblyman Leo J. Ryan, D-Burlingame, which is identical.

Unruh's bill would permit a deviation from the present law requiring new districts to be unified along the boundaries of existing high school districts. The bill would permit splitting of a high school district if each new district had a minimum of 15,000 students in average daily attendance. Such a split would be possible only if all other conditions of equal value and racial make-up were met.

"I believe this bill is about as far as I care to go at this session," Unruh said.

Senator Burgener's bill, introduced for the governor, would eliminate the two-year mandatory vote. It would permit elections to be called at will by the county superintendent of schools, by the county committee on school district organization, or by a majority of the school boards in the area.

Burgener's bill also would require that unification election ballots carried figures on the costs under a unified operation. It also would abolish the high school district boundary as the hard-and-fast rule for all new unified districts.

The minimum enrollment for each new district under a split high school district plan, under Burgener's bill, would be 10,000 students. His bill still would provide the split districts could not deviate more than 10 per cent in assessed value, nor could they impede integration of racial minorities into the school districts.

NAVY CONSIDERS USING BIG GUNS

Re-Activating Iowa-Class Battleships Gains For North Viet Bombardments

By ANDREW HAMILTON
Advanced News Service

WASHINGTON — The Navy is giving serious new consideration to bringing its biggest guns out of mothballs for shore bombardment of North Vietnam.

High Navy officials said this week that they are increasingly impressed with the arguments for re-activating a World War II battleship of the Iowa class so that its 16-inch guns can be fired on targets in the panhandle of North Vietnam.

At the same time, Adm. Ulysses S. Grant Sharp, U.S. Commander in Chief for the Pacific, said at a Pentagon news conference that "battleships would be useful (with) their heavier guns and more accurate fire. Also, they are "less vulnerable than cruisers" to fire from North Vietnamese shore batteries.

The Navy presently has one cruiser — the U.S.S. Canbarra — and up to five destroyers in Operation Sea Dragon along the coast of North Vietnam to attack coastal shipping and shore targets.

Last week the destroyer Tuner Joy suffered light damage when hit by shore fire near Thanh Hoa.

A battleship would add enormous firepower to the shore bombardment task force. One of these behemoths of the past can, in one salvo, hurl projectiles weighing 2,000 pounds — as heavy as a medium-sized automobile — from each of its nine big guns for a distance of 21 miles, with enough force to penetrate the thickest fortifications.

If aided by spotter aircraft, these guns are far more accurate than aerial bombardment.

Each battleship also carries 20 5-inch guns and a hornet's nest of smaller caliber weapons.

A cruiser carries only six 8-inch guns, each capable of firing a 260-pound projectile for 17 miles, plus ten 5-inch guns—half as many as a battleship.

The Navy has studied reactivation of a battleship in the past and rejected the idea as not worth the cost.

As recently as last summer it concluded that for the same price it would rather reactivate two cruisers and prepare a third for immediate use if needed.

But since then President Johnson has authorized naval shore bombardment of North Vietname, where the main lines of communication run south along the coast within easy range of the fleet's buns.

This new mission has stimulated a new look at the battleship question. The new study is looking into ways to pare the cost of reactivating and operating such a ship.

There are four Iowa-class battleships in mothballs: the Iowa, the New Jersey and the Wisconsin, all stored near Philadelphia, the Missouri at Bremerton, Wash.

The last of these ships to see active service, the Wisconsin, was retired in March 1958.

The Navy estimates it would cost between $11 million and $20 million to reactivate a battleship, depending upon the degree of modernization, and between $12 million and $16 million a year to operate it.

It costs about $2 million to replace a modern jet fighter-bomber lost to North Vietnamese air defenses. As of April 16, the United States had lost 505 attack aircraft in 25 months of air war against North Vietnam.

There is enough 16-inch ammunition in storage to support the operation of a battleship. This ammunition could be used with some re-working, so new production lines would not have to be re-opened.

Jane's Fighting Ships list the normal crew of an Iowa-class battleship as 2,700 men, compared to only 1,273 for a cruiser.

The navy studies, however, are looking into ways in which this large battleship complement — designed for full operation of all the ship's activities, including its air defenses — could be reduced for the limited requirements of shore bombardment.

Since it could take from six months to a year to ready a battleship for duty, the issue is coming up for decision by Navy Secretary Paul H. Nitze in the very near future.

There are indications that he will come out in favor of reactivation, although there are still many anti-battleship admirals.

HAIGHT-ASHBURY CHURCH CRISIS

Hippie Invasion Splitting The Ranks

By ROBERT STRAND

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Suppose a bunch of marijuana smoking hippies, boys with hair to their shoulders and barefoot girls in funny glasses, were using the basement of your church round-the-clock?

That's what's happening in All Saints' Episcopal Church in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury, the hippies' national capital.

And somewhat similar things are going on the district's Catholic, Methodist and Presbyterian churches.

But at All Saints, a high church parish, revolt has broken out. The dissatisfaction reflects the intense dislike of many San Franciscans for the City's latest youth movement.

All Saints' senior warden, Donald Carlson, resigned his post as top lay officer in the parish declaring:

"When a group of people reject the moral code of our society curse and swear, ar admitted fornicators, are physically unclean, reject—if not despise—the law, etc. I believe they are UnChristian and immoral.

"The fact that they may practice principles which are also Christian does not make them either Christian or religious."

Carlson's resignation was followed by the quitting of William James as Master of Acolytes (altar boys) and a cancellation of pledges representing 10 per cent of parish's income.

The trouble began early this year when the priest, the Rev. Leon Harris, 61, allowed hippies the use of the church kitchen and meeting hall.

A basement office was turned over to the Diggers, the loosely-organized operational arm of the hippie movement.

REV. LEON HARRIS

The Diggers—by begging, scrounging and hard work—feed over a hundred persons free each day in Golden Gate Park. They also provide free shelter for all in several flats scattered around the Haight-Ashbury's 50-block area of Victorian residences.

Father Harris says the hippies — youths who have dropped out of conventional society to form "a new subculture" based on love—have "a very strong and urgent spiritual hunger."

"They are far more religious than the average young person," he says. "How many other young people take an interest in meditation?"

For Father Harris, hippies are "a manifestation of a major social revolution which is sweeping the world and may quite possibly go down in history as the most significant development of the 20th century."

The priest says the hippies have rejected the church as hypocritical, and "if we extend the right hand of fellowship, we may lead hippies to a reconciliation.

"If we do what the conservatives say — wrap ourselves in a cocoon and call hippies wicked and awful people — they are lost for good."

In addition, the priest feels the church has a duty as good samaritans to aid and comfort the youthful hippies. "Our Lord had strong things to say about the Pharisee who pulled his garments about him lest he be contaminated," he says.

He says his critics are motivated by fear. "They don't know what the hippies are up to and suspect the worst."

"Some, devoted to the Establishment, might well have fear. The hippies are up to revolution."

One of Father Harris' parishioners, Mrs. Charles E. Neal, takes a somewhat different view.

"How do you know they are not on an LSD kick," she asks. "Would you send your children to church where they will meet people like this?"

Her husband, an automotive electrician, has withdrawn from the church because "I refuse to contribute to any organization encouraging people to follow such a movement."

The worry about drugs was heightened with the finding of an abandoned hypodermic needle in a Sunday school room. Later, it was speculated that the needle had been left by a volunteer doctor who regularly visits to care for the Diggers.

Father Harris concedes most hippies use marijuana, which he considers innocuous, and some use LSD, which he believes dangerous.

But with LSD he says they are seeking "an avenue to God and they think LSD provides it." He says use of the drug isn't very different from the fasting and desert meditations which produced visions of early Christian mystics.

In much, but not all of this, the priest has the backing of his bishop, C. Kilmer Myers, who recently wrote:

"I am delighted—more than I can say adequately — with the relevant involvement of All Saints' parish in the Haight-Ashbury community."

The bishop "heartily" endorsed Father Harris' efforts, and promised to provide an extra priest to help.

What is bothering parish dissidents more and more, are warnings of Father Harris that Haight-Ashbury hippies may attract perhaps 200,000 youths, many penniless, to San Francisco this summer.

He believes the community should prepare for the care of young people who, by their own foolishness and short-sightedness, find themselves without food and shelter.

This kind of talk, the rebels say, only encourages the influx.

Replies the priest, "Are you encouraging danger when you shout that a bull is headed towards somebody?

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The old man, who molded a viable Germany from the rubble of the Armageddon which destroyed Adolf Hitler's dream of a 1000-year-Reich, died this week.

He was Konrad Adenauer, 91, the autocratic, iron-willed and controversial ex-chancellor of West Germany.

"Der Alte," the old man, as he was popularly referred to, was reclaimed by the Americans in 1945 from the political dustbin where he had been consigned by Nazis.

Adenauer had been mayor of Cologne in the early thirties when Nazis tried to drape the Rhine Bridge with swastika flags. The mayor ordered the flags taken down, an act which led to his firing by Hermann Goering.

The advancing Americans reinstated Adenauer as lord mayor of Cologne when that city was little more than a pile of smouldering ruins.

Ironically, it was his dismissal from office by the British who took the city over from the Americans, which led to his future success.

The firing for "inefficiency" permitted Adenauer to turn his energies to the task of rebuilding the Christian Democratic Party which surprised the experts in the 1949 general elections by winning 31 per cent of the German national vote against the 29 per cent of the Social Democrats.

This victory led to Adenauer's elevation to the post of chancellor and his firm guidance of West Germany for 14 years during which the country became stable, wealthy and a meaningful member of the West.

Federal Agents Raid Bay Mansion Arsenal

GUN COLLECTOR — Mrs. William Thoreson III, 30, hides her face in San Francisco as she is being led to court on charges of illegal possession of automatic weapons and violation of San Francisco's fire code by storing ammunition. She was freed on $1,100 bail, then rejoined her husband for dinner last night in their Pacific Heights mansion.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Federal agents raided a mansion yesterday and found its rooms crammed with crates of arms and ammunition, including at least one anti-tank gun, four machineguns, and tons of automatic rifles.

The agents arrested Mrs. Louise Thoresen, 30, wife of William Thoresen III, son of the president of the Great Western Steel Corp. of Chicago.

As Mrs. Thoresen was being placed in a police cruiser she was joined by her son, Mike, who was wearing a child's toy gun belt with two pistols in holsters. The boy was placed in protective custody.

NEW YORK ARREST

Mrs. Thoresen was taken before a U.S. commissioner and ordered held for further proceedings. She was charged with illegal possession of deadly weapons.

The U.S. attorney's office indicated there might be other raids in the San Francisco Bay area. A spokesman declined to say why the arms and ammunition were stored in the mansion.

Mrs. Thoresen was arrested at Kennedy International Airport in New York City Dec. 20 after an arsenal was discovered in the lost-and-found department of United Air Lines.

New York police said at the time that she had apparently been using the airport for a safe deposit vault for her collection of pistols, ammunition, bayonets, machinegun parts, riot guns and even a portable flame-thrower.

Mrs. Thoresen was released on bond, and her case is still pending in New York courts. A spokesman for the U.S. attorney also said her husband was once arrested in New York for illegal possession of arms.

BLAST CHARGED

In 1964 he was arrested in Tucson on charges resulting from four explosions near a radio station. The charges were later dismissed.

The raid here was conducted by agents of the federal alcohol and tobacco tax unit.

The agents said several boxes and crates were addressed to Mrs. Thoresen at the mansion. Some boxes were stacked on the back of the residence, the added.

The cache included 1,200 rounds of .38 caliber ammunition and 1,000 rounds of .45 caliber ammunition.

Mrs. Thoresen's mansion is across the street from the residence of Roman Catholic Archbishop Josepth T. McGucken.

WEALTHY COLLECTOR — William Thoreson III, heir to a steel fortune, is characterized by the couple's defense attorney Jake Ehrlich as "kind of a screwball in some ways —he just likees to collect old weapons." (AP Wirehpoto)

A "brainstorming session" on future salaries of teachers in Mill Valley School District will be held Tuesday by the district's salary study committee at 8 p.m. at 26 Miller Avenue.

Strike Still On At Catholic University

WASHINGTON (AP) — A faculty leader in the Catholic University teacher-student strike protesting the firing of a young priest-professor says there will be no compromise with the school's board of trustees.

There was no official indication what course the board would take to end the general campus shutdown —generated by trustees' dismissal of the Rev. Charles E. Curran — which moved into its third day today.

"There is no compromise," the Very Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, dean of the School of Sacred Theology, told a news conference yesterday. "We will not teach unless and until the board reinstates Father Curran."

The 600-member faculty voted overwhelmingly to strike Thursday in protest against the dismissal of their colleague.

Father Curran has said his liberal views, which include abolition of the traditional church ban against use of contraceptives for birth control, apparently led to his ouster.

The 6,600-member student body began boycotting classes Wednesday after the faculty and students of the theology school voted to stay away from classrooms.

Since then the students have demonstrated at rallies and participated in a protest vigil in front of the university's administration building. The demonstrations and vigil were to continue today.

Race Track Threatened In Housing Demonstration

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Police were fired upon last night while investigating an abandoned car containing materials for making Molotov cocktails near an open housing demonstration.

In the fifth straight night of racial disturbances, some 85 open-housing advocates demonstrated near the famous Churchill Downs race track, home of the Kentucky Derby. Before yesterday, the demonstrations hade been confined to the all-white Beachmont section of the city.

Five persons, including two young women, were arrested in two other cars. They were believed linked to the two men carrying Molotov cocktail apparatus. The five were charged with carrying a concealed deadly weapon.

In all, some 120 persons were arrested. The demonstrators were charged with disorderly conduct. Most of the Negro demonstrators are students at Kentucky State College in Frankfort, 55 miles east of Louisville.

Police said 17 demonstrators appeared at Beechmont section, scene of previous demonstrations and were quickly arrested.

The switch by the open housing advocates to Churchill Downs, came as leaders reaffirmed their threat to continue the demonstrations through the annual Kentucky Derby May 6.

Hosea Williams, a top aide of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., told a pre-demonstration audience: "There will be no Kentucky Derby until there is open housing."

The Grim Game Of Practice War

Tests Probe For Flaws In Uncle Sam's Air Defenses

Generally, days at Hamilton Air Force Base are very similar.

Airmen go to offices each morning. Pilots spend much of their time on the flight line. Children wait for the bus to take them to school.

BUT FOR SOME of Hamilton's men and women, the routine changes drastically two or three days of each month. These are the days of "the exercise."

"The exercise." All those words mean is "the test." But this test is unlike any a child takes in school.

THE EXERCISE is, in essence, a war — a war fought to find how effective the more than 28,000 men and women of the Western North American Air Defense (NORAD) Region are at their job of protecting 11 western states and two provinces of Canada against any intruder.

Under the command of Maj. Gen. Ethan A. Chapman, Western NORAD is a prime example of cooperation. Forces of Canada and the United States have joined together to defend this portion of the North American continent.

THIS WAR IS different from any history has known before. There are no battle lines drawn on huge maps. No columns of troops ride down dusty roads to the front. No commander with gleaming pistols at his side reviews his troops on the front lines.

windowless buildings. The rooms are filled with blue light. Over the soft talking of the men on the duty the whirr of the air conditioner is heard.

The commander watches a small television screen which shows him the battle situation hundreds of miles away. To change from one "battle field" to another, he merely pushes a set of buttons.

It is this type of battle test and experience that the exercise brings to General Chapman and his men. They must learn to know this new enemy and battleground just as well as they knew others in Korea and World War II.

The monthly "war" begins in the minds of the exercise planners. Wing Commander W. I. Gordon, a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and five other officers dream up the methods of attacking our country.

THEIR JOB IS to test our air defenses to their limits. They work to expose a possible flaw in our planning. If they can point out that fault, it can then be corrected before it is too late.

Once they have dedided on a plan, the work really begins. For some reason, the "war" begins early in the morning. Sixty sleepy men walk into the blue light of Hamilton's Western exciting concepts from Orinda pools

One reason more people are buying ORINDA pools this year is because ORINDA pools cost less to buy. Your ORINDA custom pool representative, in fact, can show you on paper that, not only is the base price lower in most cases, but when you add the options you want, the price advantage of an ORINDA pool becomes even greater.

And because it is an ORINDA pool, you get all the advantages of an ORINDA pool. The uncommon luxury of design and engineering by Orinda, and styling leadership that has made ORINDA Pools the best selling in northern California.

All of which is still just the beginning. *A giant Laars boiler is included with the 1967 Orinda Custom Royal Series providing low cost heating year long. You also have the traditionally conservative value of an ORINDA pool to enjoy. On top of all the other advantages.

Once they take their positions in the many rooms of the two-story building, they hear briefings telling them their country faces a national emergency.

EACH HAS A job to do. Communications officers make sure the telephone lines linking Hamilton with radar stations and combat centers throughout the western United States are working.

Weather officers begin briefings informing the commander as to the kind of weather his pilots will encounter as they fly to meet the enemy.

Radar specialists show a picture of the radar net covering the West Coast. The enemy will have to fly through this electronic curtain before he can reach our country.

EACH MAN HAS one thing in mind: "Give the commander the best idea we can of what shape we are in to fight the air battle. His decisions will be based on our facts."

Each officer watches while at remote stations, radar specialists, weapons officers and computers work together to guide our pilots to the point in space where they will meet the enemy.

SHOULD THE ENEMY elude our fighters, Army missile experts wait to confront him with supersonic Nike missiles.

In other rooms, officers work to repair damage to bases caused by the enemy's missiles. Doctors, engineers, battle damage officers and personnel experts all try to bring units the enemy has hurt back up to fighting strength.

After what seems a short time, the battle is over. Ten hours have gone by. But the speed of the war makes a person lose track of time.

WITH THE END of the battle, the work must still go on. "How well did we do? What did we lose? Where did we make our mistakes?"

These are questions that can only be answered by careful study and evaluation of the exercise. How the commander has met and solved the problems given him by the exercise branch determines how ready his forces are to meet an enemy attack.

As the evaluation of the exercise ends, one small war is over. But another will begin next week or the week after. This next one may pose a new problem. It may find a weak point in our air defense net not previously uncovered.

BUT THAT IS the whole point of the exercise. As Maj. Calvin J. Gingrich, an officer assigned to the Western NORAD staff, puts it, "The exercise gives us the chance to make an error and correct it before we face a time where we cannot afford mistakes."

The practice war is as much a part of the routine at Hamilton as catching the bus to San Francisco is to the commuting business man.

Sisters Of Holy Family Serve Quietly In Marin

For Half A Century They Have Taught Catechism To School Children

By YSABEL MORGAN

The Sisters of the Holy Family will be celebrating tomorrow the silver jubilee of their Marin County convent at 125 Prospect Avenue, San Anselmo.

Their services in Marin as religious instructors, however, go back yet another quarter of a century.

IT WAS IN 1916 that Fr. William Cantwell, pastor of St. Anselm's Church in San Anselmo, requested the Sisters to come to his community to teach catechism to the children of the parish. It was work they were already performing in San Francisco.

So for several years two of the nuns would each Sunday morning leave their motherhouse, cross the bay by ferryboat, and board the train that carried them to San Anselmo for their work as teachers.

The parish grew, and it became necessary to establish a separate parish at Fairfax. Here, too, the Sisters of the Holy Family taught. Gradually still other Marin parishes sought their services.

WITH THE ADVENT of World War II and the population explosion in Marin, the demand for their teaching became so great that the Sisters began looking for a permanent residence in the county.

The late Ann McConnell heard of their problem and contacted Fr. John McGarr, now monsignor, pastor of St. Anselm's

In The Public Interest

I was talking with my good friend and business associate, Lloyd Conant, the other day and we got off on the subject of the billions of dollars that are lost each year by retail business establishments because of inefficient, or non-existent, training of personnel — the personnel who, in one way or another, come in contact with the customer.

It seems to be a natural tendency on the part of thousands of working people to try, in every way they can, to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. They do this by giving less, often a great deal less, than their best to the customer. They do this, as a rule, through ignorance. They're not stupid; they're simply ignorant of what makes a business tick. They don't realize that it's the customer who pays their checks each week. The boss can't meet his payroll unless he has enough customers and the person who determines whether the customer comes back or not is the employee with whom the customer must deal.

I know there are bad customers. As a rule, a bad customer, one who gives the clerk, or waiter, or waitress, or attendant a bad time, who refuses to be pleased, satisfied, or grateful, or gracious, is the same person who gives the customer a bad time where he or she works. But this is unimportant. It is not the duty of the employee to be nice to good customers and rude to bad customers. It is the duty — the responsibility of the employee to be gracious, helpful and friendly to all customers. And if he or she is really smart, especially kind and gracious service will be given to the miserable customer. If the customer is at all human, he'll thaw under this kind of treatment and come back again and recommend the place to his friends. If the customer is one of those miserable "Wierdos" who refuses to be nice as a matter of principle and neurosis, his inability to get under the skin of the employee who remains unperturbed will infuriate him and make him sick with helpless confusion. What better result could the employee want than this?

In the beginning I said that billions of dollars are lost each year by retail businesses because of inefficient, or non-existent training of personnel. The training can be no better than the owner, or manager can provide. And this depends upon the degree of training the owner or manager has managed to obtain for himself. You can't teach something you don't know. Nor can you provide the excellent training aids available today, if you haven't made the necessary effort to find and examine them for yourself.

The most important, valuable person in the world to a business establishment is the customer, or prospective customer. To put this valuable person in the hands of untrained personnel is sheer lunacy. A week should never pass without some sort of communication between management and the people on the firing line. If meetings can be held, so much the better. But if this is impracticable, a message of some kind, a message calculated to impress upon the employee the vital role of the customer and his care and feeding should somehow be made available. It is very rare that an unhappy or sighted customer will complain to management. He will simply never come back. He should never be lost in the first place.

Employees should be carefully screened, and very carefully and continuously trained. If they still can't get it through their heads to treat the customer the way they themselves like to be treated, they should be immediately discharged. The damage they can do is incalculable.

THE LARGE DWELLING at 125 Prospect Avenue, San Anselmo, that serves as the Marin convent of the Sisters of the Holy Family was a gift of the late Ann McConnell.

Church and dean of the county. He had been assisting the nuns in their search for quarters. Through him, Miss McConnell, a non-Catholic, now offered the Sisters a gift of a house at 125 Prospect Avenue, San Anselmo, that she had inherited from the late James F. Leahy.

Miss McConnell had served Leahy, president of the Simmons Mattress Manufacturing Co. and member of an old and prominent San Francisco family that included among its holdings the old Tivoli Opera House, as housekeeper and nurse for a number of years.

HER BENEFACTOR, Miss McConnell felt, would have approved of the gift of the house to the Sisters, since he had frequently entertained members of the clergy who were his close friends there during his lifetime.

Her gift was accepted. After remodeling, the dedication ceremonies were held in 1942.

Today six Sisters of the Holy Family order under the leadership of Sister Superior Mary Cornelia reside in the stately old house.

FROM THERE, through the years, the Sisters have gone forth to teach religious subjects to children attending public schools in Sausalito, Larkspur, Greenbrae, Nicasio, Fairfax, Lagunitas, Inverness, Point Reyes Station, Santa Venetia, Terra Linda, Loch Lomond, Hamilton Air Force Base and Novato, as well as Napa in Sonoma County.

They also have a class at the Cedars Development Foundation in Ross for mentally retarded children.

Their schedules have included "released time" and after-school classes, as well as home visitations.

Sister Mary Miriam of the Holy Family Sisters was selected a few years ago for a "distinguished woman" award for her work with the mentally retarded youngsters.

The order can trace its history back into the early 1870s and to a most unusual beginning.

IN THE CHAPEL of their Marin convent, the Sisters of the Holy Family are pictured in prayer. Six of the members of the order are stationed in Marin County.

THEN A YOUNG girl, Elizabeth Armer, called on Bishop Joseph Alemany in San Francisco to discuss with him her wish to become a Carmelite nun. He praised her for her ambition, but asked if she had considered entering other work for the Church. He mentioned the many small children in need of care while their mothers worked. Someone, he said, should be teaching these boys and girls the ways of their faith. Someone, too, he added, should be visiting the poor.

Such work, the bishop said, was the kind of thing he felt Elizabeth Armer could perform very well. She agreed to try.

So Elizabeth Armer became the founder of a new order in that year — 1872 — and with a few other young women who joined with her she proceeded to set up in San Francisco's downtown area a "day nursery" home to which working mothers could bring their babies for care while they were at their jobs.

THE MEMBERS OF the new order found themselves caring for these children from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. — and sometimes later.

The need for their services grew, so that centers were established in other sections of the city including North Beach and South-of-Market.

A Need Produced A New Sisterhood

The work increased, but other girls joined, and the demand was met. But the original home of the Sisters on Hayes Street below Van Ness Avenue became inadequate. Land was acquired at Hayes and Fillmore, then considered "way out in the country," and a large three-story convent was built there.

The sisters had begun by caring for infants. But gradually they had come to accept children almost ready to enter school. And as they did so, they began instructing those older charges in some of the basics of learning that would serve them in good stead in their schooling.

MANY OF THE mothers were earning only a dollar a day, and some less than that. Some had two or three children who were left at the center. But in such hardship cases, the nuns waived all fees and provided the care and meals free.

Interested friends helped the young Sisters in maintaining their program. Still, at times, the going was rough. Sometimes sympathetic tradesmen came to their aid with free bread, vegetables, fruits and meats and other leftovers from their day's business. Without refrigeration, the food would have spoiled anyway.

But for the Sisters, and the boys and girls they were keeping, it was a godsend.

THINGS HAD begun moving more smoothly when the 1906 earthquake and fire struck, destroying most of San Francisco and all the day care centers or day homes. The Sisters' own motherhouse at Hayes and Fillmore, however, was far enough out to be spared from the flames. From there, the Sisters began to rebuild their program.

The day home in North Beach was rebuilt. But because Bay Area population had changed and expanded, the additional centers were located at 16th and Dolores in San Francisco, and in Oakland and San Jose. These are still functioning.

The unusual work being carried on by the Holy Family order had become widely known, and more and more requests for their services were coming in from all parts of California and from other states. When Boulder Dam was built, the Sisters answered the call to establish a child care center there. They are still carrying on their work in the Las Vegas area.

PROGRAMS WERE started in other California communities and in Nevada, Utah, Texas and the Hawaiian Islands.

The workload of the sisterhood was increasing in more ways than simply geographical. Larger quarters than the motherhouse were needed and found eventually in Mission San Jose. Extensive construction was required, but the result was a building that fitted the order's needs for a novitiate in which young girls entering the order could receive their training. The setting is a beautiful and inspiring one, and the Sisters feel that perhaps this time they have a location that will continue to serve their needs for all time.

Through the years five Marin girls have joined the order.

SISTER MARY Rufina was a member of the pioneer Butler family of San Anselmo. Sister Mary Raymond was from another pioneer San Anselmo family, the Mannings.

Sister Mary Bridget was from the Philip Cullen family of San Anselmo, Sister Mary Georgette from the George Reeder family of Fairfax and Sister Mary Jeanna from the Richard Hexter family of San Rafael.

GUILDS WERE SET up in many California counties to assist the order in acquiring its novitiate at Mission San Jose. Those and new guilds have continued to support the order. Included is the Marin guild, whose members will be on hand tomorrow at the San Anselmo convent to help the Sisters in celebrating the silver jubilee event.

Mrs. George Pavlisin of Mill Valley, guild president, heads a committee composed of junior past president Mrs. Alfred Ruggiero, Mrs. Kenneth Larkins, Mrs. J. A. Reilly, Mrs. Walter Garrett, Mrs. L. E. Schwab, Mrs. C. Stanley Lawrence, Mrs. M. McMahon, Mrs. Elsa McCarthy, Mrs. Harold Bates, Mrs. Arthur Luchetti, Mrs. Herman Fuetsch, Mrs. Franklin J. Buscher Jr., Mrs. Daniel Sheehy, Mrs. Dare Morgan and Mrs. William Fahy.

Mrs. Fahy of San Francisco, formerly of Mill Valley, played a leading role in helping the Sisters to establish the guilds, and was the first president of the Marin guild.

THE PUBLIC IS invited to attend a reception at the San Anselmo convent tomorrow from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

It will afford Marinites an opportunity to become acquainted with one of the least publicized of the religious orders in their midst, a sisterhood that has gone quietly about its duties of teaching and caring for children.

Because of the limited parking in the vicinity of the convent, a shuttle service will be provided from Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Barber Avenue to the convent for those who cannot walk.

AT ST. PATRICK'S School in Larkspur, Sister Superior Mary Cornelia of the Sisters of the Holy Family teaches a class in catechism. The nuns serve as religious instructors to students of a number of Marin and Sonoma schools.

IN THE READING ROOM and social hall of their Marin convent, three Sisters of the Holy Family order enjoy quiet relaxation. Sister Roberta Marie reads while Sister Mary Mark cares for the bird and Sister Mary Regina adjusts the radio.

Marin Living—Townhouse Style

More Are Discovering Its Merits

"Townhouse" is a term being heard more and more often in Marin County realty and housing construction circles.

But the potential buyer who has not followed housing trends and developments closely may well find himself asking:

"What is a townhouse?" And "why?"

FROM A PROJECT salesman he will get these answers:

A townhouse is a single family dwelling that rests on its own foundation and is sheltered under its own roof, but whose side or party walls frequently touch another.

Ownership, the salesman will add, is by grant deed, and each purchaser must negotiate his own loan and pay his own taxes as does the typical home owner.

To which the buyer may than ask: "But what is so great about that?"

THE SALESMAN, very likely, will reply with a question of his own: "Do you folks own a house?"

If the reply is affirmative, the salesman will then note: "It's spring. Time to get started on the weeding and the spring gardening, isn't it?"

If the husband's face turns sour with reluctant agreement, the salesman knows he is on his way. And he presses his advantage:

"How would you like to have someone else do all your gardening for you — pull the weeds, trim the roses, mow the lawn? Does that sound appealing?"

"This," the salesman continues, "is exactly what happens when you live in a townhouse.

"If you own a house down the street, you can rarely afford to hire a gardener. But when you have townhouse nieghbors, you all 'divvy up' the cost. It amounts to only a pittance for each of you."

THIS SAME principle of collaboration makes possible such amenities of good living as the swimming pool and other recreation facilities, a sauna, group insurance and good building maintenance for those who might not be able to afford such services and luxuries without the benefits of shared costs, the salesman adds. The result is almost a country club atmosphere.

If the salesman has, indeed, struck home with his points the prospective buyer is now thoroughly interested. "You mean," he might say, "I can play golf over the weekend and not have a guilty conscience that I am goofing off on necessary homework?"

And his kindly real estate salesman will assure him: "Yes, indeed. Or you can bask in the warm sun beside the pool while somebody else is weeding your garden. Wouldn't this be a wonderful feeling?"

THE ARCHITECTURE of the Peacock Hill townhouses is conventional and warm, with an interesting use of shingles and stucco that minimizes maintenance and fits in ideally with the park-like environment. Marin townhouses, generally, encompass superior taste in their design and construction. (Photo by Don Meacham)

ALL THIS conversation, of course, is hypothetical. But a great deal of talk along these lines is taking place in Marin these days. And more than a few wind up eventually in sales and deeds. The "chore free" idea of living makes a strong sales point.

Of course, somewhere along the line, in the course of our mythical little chat, the prospective customer might have voiced one of the two objections most frequently encountered by townhouse proponents — the limited privacy, and restricted space.

In Marin County, however, planners and builders of townhouse projects have anticipated such concern, and have sought to eliminate or minimize those limitations through good, imaginative design.

THEY HAVE succeeded to a remarkable degree, and townhouses frequently offer a spaciousness that would be the envy of many residents of the more orthodox homes. Few townhouse inhabitants are left without ample opportunitites to enjoy themselves, indoors or out, in surroundings shielded from the scrutiny of neighbors or passers-by.

No two townhouse projects are alike. Each reflects the imagination and ingenuity of its developer in capitalizing upon a particular situation.

Porto Bello, for example, is oriented to boating. Peacock Hill and The Knoll overlook a golf course. Tiburon Terrace has a spectacular view. Harbor Villages features low cost . . . to name only a few.

TOWNHOUSE projects also vary greatly in size.

The largest project now under construction in Marin is developer Jerry Hoytt's Casa Marinwood located on Miller Creek Road off Highway 101. This townhouse complex with an early California, Spanish motif includes 109 two, three and four bedroom homes. It is the first such project in Marin County to obtain Federal Housing Administration financing.

Smallest and most exclusive project is Peacock Hill, a cluster of 14 cottage-type buildings around an L-shaped cul-de-sac. Peacock Hill offers tranquility, a charming view of golf course and wooded hills, and its own private swim club.

IN THE BOATING community, Porto Bello has aroused considerable interest due to its docking facilities on the San Rafael Canal. Of the 52 units in the development, half face directly on the waterfront and overlook the waterway's busy marine traffic.

Porto Bello's developer, San Rafael Newport Co., designed a greater variety of models than is typically found in most townhouse projects, offering both two and three bedrooms and these in both one and two story elevations. Each of the 52 units has facilities for docking up to a 45-foot boat included as a part of the basic price; also swimming and sun-bathing facilities.

For high style and elegance, both The Knoll in Peacock Gap and Tiburon Terrace in Tiburon appeal to the carriage trade.

THE KNOLL'S 30 two-three and four bedroom units include such recreational features as its exclusive Buckeye Club, a sunken swimming pool set in a beautifully landscaped parklike setting, a putting green and shuffleboard court. These townhouses directly overlook the

11th fairway of Peacock Gap Golf Course.

Tiburon's entry into the townhouse market is a 20-unit project of very large three and four bedroom homes which were designed to capture a sweeping view of the Belvedere Lagoon, Richardson Bay and Mount Tamalpais. This project and Casa Marinwood are now under construction and will be on the market in the late spring.

Title to a townhouse normally is passed by grant deed with the land either subdivided into townhouse lots, or owned in common by a condominium deed.

IN ACTUAL operating practice, the condominium and the townhouse lot methods work out similarly for the owner, as in both situations a non-profit corporation is formed to manage the common areas and supervise the "hired help."

Porto Bello is an interesting example of how these two methods work out. The original 34 units were developed as a "straight condominium" whereas the last 18 units, named Porto Bello West, were set up as a townhouse lot development. Each has a home owners' board of directors to look after the "chores."

In addition to shared costs, the townhouse community offers other advantages.

TO THE GENERAL neighborhood, the building of a townhouse project is assurance of a tidy, well-kept neighbor with trimmed lawns, painted exteriors, and a generally prosperous appearance.

To the community planner, the townhouse project provides for needed open spaces or green belt, with recreation facilities, off-street parking, professionally landscaped gardens and a density factor which is much lower than would have resulted had an apartment complex been constructed there.

The former renter who has now become a townhouse owner discovers that he not only has retained most of the advantages of communal living (i.e. having his "chores" done for him), but that he has at long last crossed into the land of a home owner where he may earn substantial income tax savings through the device of deducting interest and property tax payments from his gross income.

THE FORMER house owner, used to having neighbors next door and accustomed to inevitable community noises, is suddenly aware of the greater quiet which results from the townhouse's soundproof construction. He may realize with a start that 12 feet of air space between houses is not so good a sound barrier as are the double stud walls and sound board which are typical of townhouse party walls.

Not everyone, of course, is open to townhouse living as the developer and his sales staff are quick to recognize. Growing families, including newly married couples, which constitute the great bulk of home-buying public, are seldom prospects.

A recent survey of townhouse buyers in Marin County shows the typical buyer to be older than average.

A PATTERN OF five basic buying groups emerges: (1) retired couples; (2) couples whose children have grown up and finally left home. (The old house is much too big for them); (3) couples who have interests other than gardening and are searching for a simplified way of living which will free them for the pursuit of these hobbies; (4) renters (especially working couples), who

THE MUCH prized country club atmosphere of recreation and relaxation is one of the prime attractions of The Knolls townhouses at Peacock Gap. Adding to the air of luxury is the Buckeye Club recreational area, shared by the residents, with its sunken swimming pool, putting green, sunning area and rolling lawns. Townhouse Living Is Carefree

After talking to developers and builders it is obvious that we have seen only a beginning of townhouse building in Marin County. Many projects are now in the planning stage and drawing boards are blossoming with new plans to provide simplified townhouse living in comfortable, modern, convenient homes ideally suited to the Marin County way of life.

Prices will range from low $20,000 category to high $40,000 units, depending on size, location and elegance.

But as with home replacement costs, buyers will face higher asking prices each year as land becomes more valuable, labor unions bargain for higher wages and materials costs escalate. This trend inevitably will result in a favorable market with each resale townhouse unit, bringing a profit to the seller as has been the pattern in the resale of Marin's subdivision homes.

Yellowstone Is Set For Busy Season

The Travel Pages

After a record-breaking wintertime visitation, Yellowstone National Park officially opens its gates to summer tourists on May 1.

Gone is the deep mantle of white and the clicking treads of snowmobiles; in their place is an emerald-green Yellowstone Park with 300 miles of paved highways probing its unusual wonderland of forest, lake, geyser and hot springs.

AN ALL-TIME record of 2,130,323 visitors set in 1966 will probably be broken this season as people from all parts of the world pay homage to the first, and perhaps most famous, national park.

Yellowstone's visitor accommodations at Old Faithful, Mammoth, Canyon, Lake, and West Thumb open on staggered dates to accommodate the camera-clad traveler. Yellowstone has overnight lodging for 9,000 persons.

Roosevelt Dude Lodge near Tower Fall in the Northeast region of the Park will feature stagecoach rides. Antique Concord coaches — the remnants of a once-proud fleet that roamed the park before the "horseless carriage" was invented — are kept in original condition for the pleasure of the tourist.

HORSEBACK RIDES are also available at Roosevelt, Canyon, Old Faithful, and Mammoth Hot Springs horse corrals offer rides of varying length, too.

Sparkling Yellowstone Lake lies near the center of this renowned park. This large alpine lake is a favorite for trout fishermen. No license is required to angle for the scrappy cutthroat trout.

Bridge Bay, Fishing Bridge, and West Thumb marinas offer fishing equipment and boat rentals. Scenicruiser excursion boats also leave these docks on regular schedules.

THE NATIONAL Park Service holds evening campfire programs, and conducts guided walks at all major areas. Visitor centers (museums) at Mammoth, Norris, Geyser Basin, Madison Junction, Fishing Bridge, Old Faithful, Canyon, and Grant Village inform the traveler about the park's geysers, wildlife and strange volcanic backgrounds.

Bus tours are a most relaxing way to see Yellowstone. Experienced driver-guides describe the wonderous sights along the way. A special bus winds upward to the very tip of 10,317 foot Mount Washburn for a spectacular vista of the Yellowstone country.

This famous park is now open year round. However, the general touring season ends the last week of October.

LOCATED IN THE northeast corner of Wyoming, Yellowstone is reached by five entrances: North, South, East, West, and Northeast.

Additional information can be obtained from the National Park Service, Yellowstone National Park, Wyo., 83020, or from travel agents.

YELLOWSTONE wouldn't be Yellowstone without the black bears. Park regulations prohibit the feeding of wild animals by visitors, but that doesn't keep bruin from trying. Black bears are a common sight throughout Yellowstone National Park.

UPPER FALLS, one of the unforgettable spectacles of Yellowstone, can be viewed close-up from an observation platform. The river tumbles 109 feet in a graceful fall through foaming cataracts.

THIS UNUSUAL VIEW of Yosemite Falls in Yosemite National Park was made by the noted photographer Ansel Adams and was shot from slightly above the level of Yosemite Valley. It shows both Upper and Lower Falls in their spectacular descents.

Falls Of Yosemite To Be At Their Grandest In '67

The most recent snow survey by Yosemite rangers indicates that snow depths in the Yosemite Sierra Nevada range are about 25 per cent deeper than the 30 year average and 100 per cent deeper than last winter.

This presents a highly optimistic outlook for water supply agencies and the farmers, so far as water supply is concerned. And, it means that Yosemite Valley will have a more spectacular — and longer — waterfall season than it has enjoyed in many years.

Yosemite's four major falls, Yosemite, Bridalveil, Vernal and Nevada, have been trickling all winter, but will soon burst forth in dramatic torrents. If usual weather patterns are experienced, the falls will be at their fullest in mid- to late May, and should flow through the month of August.

BRIDALVEIL and Yosemite Falls are visible from the Valley floor; to see Vernal and Nevada, visitors make a short walk from the east end of the valley.

Of the lot, Yosemite is far and away the most majestic, dropping 2,425 feet (nine times as high as Niagara) from a fairly narrow bed. The water literally leaps from cliff edge, drops 1,430 feet, rushes through a cascade, then plunges once more 320 feet in a roaring, crashing torrent. Bridalveil, 620 feet, is somewhat more orderly in its fall. But, when it crashes into its rocky bed, the swirling sprays of mist are blown upward by the prevailing breeze.

An unknown romantic, years past, claimed the mist appeared as a bride's veil. In the late afternoon, when the sun lies at a low angle, lovely rainbows appear in the spray.

THE MERCED River, which gathers high in the Sierra, rushes over Nevada Falls, 594 feet, then over Vernal Fall, 317 feet, in a matter of a half mile. Those making the short hike to see them are well repaid for their efforts.

In the springtime, there are numbers of less celebrated waterfalls, of short life but of great beauty.

Behind The Ahwahnee Hotel is the Royal Arch Fall. Having a less well defined bed than Yosemite Falls, it is wide and wild. Down the cliffs behind Camp Curry are the Staircase Falls, small streamlets that drop precisely in short steps down the 4,000-foot cliff.

Ribbon Fall, actually the highest of the falls, 1,612 feet, has a short but lovely life. Fed by Ribbon Creek, a small stream, its waters become vapor along the way.

Eurailpass For Thrifty

An economical supplement to the low cost 21 day jet flights to Europe or for people fortunate to get to the Continent on an even less expensive charter flight is the 21-day Eurailpass, which costs only $99.

Since this one ticket is good for unlimited first class railroad travel in 13 Western European countries, tourists can enjoy considerable savings through the extra free travel they can get from Eurailpass.

The basic price of the Eurailpass could be easily used up in a few trips, if passage were purchased on a city to city basis. For example, an itinerary covering 10 major cities in six countries would amount to $224.85 including extra fares, compared to just $99 for the Eurailpass ticket. Tourists would go from Paris, Nice, Rome, Naples, Florence, Milan, Vienna, Munich, Copenhagen, Amsterdam, and back to Paris.

Another variation would begin in Copenhagen and continue to Stockholm, Oslo, Gothenburg, Frederikshavn, Hamburg, Amsterdam, Paris, Cologne and return to Copenhagen. The total cost on tickets bought city to city would amount to $156.50.

Free use of many boats and buses are also part of the plus benefits of traveling with Eurailpass. Here is a recommended trip that includes a boat ride. It would go from Amsterdam to Brussels, Luxembourg, Basel, Zurich, Chur, Brig, Berne, Lausanne by boat to Geneva, Milan, Venice, Florence, Nice, and Paris. The total cost would normally be $131.10.

Eurailpass is honored in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland. It is also available for one month, $130; two months, $175; and for three months, $205.

LORD BERTRAND RUSSELL has written the memoirs of the first half of his life which began with his birth into British aristocracy in 1872. Written a decade ago, publication of "The Autobiography of Bertrand Russell" was delayed until principals except the author were deceased.

THE BOOK PAGES

The Aristocrat Turned Rebel Tells About His Early Years

By DON KEOWN

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF BERTRAND RUSSELL by Bertrand Russell, Atlantic-Little, Brown, 356 pages, $7.95.

". . . I have realized more and more the importance she had in moulding my outlook on life. Her fearlessness, her public spirit, her contempt for convention, and her indifference to the opinion of the majority have always seemed good to me and have impressed me as worthy of imitation."

Bertrand Russell is speaking of his Victorian grandmother, an opinionated, domineering and rather terrifying old lady who was the single most influential factor in the shaping of her grandson's character.

By the end of "The Autobiography of Bertrand Russell," something of a misnomer in that it carries the reader only up to World War I, that character is firmly established.

Russell the intellectual, the aristocrat turned rebel, is committed to the role of upholder of unpopular causes to which he dedicated the remainder of his years. It has made him a figure both idolized and detested, but most certainly one of the towering intellects of this century.

Americans smarting from Russell's biting criticism of this country's international adventures will note that the philosopher - mathematician - humanitarian's embrace of pacifism is no recent or peculiarly anti-American belief. As this book ends, Russell is preparing to go to prison because of his opposition to his own country's involvement in World War I.

In the pages that come before, the reader is led through the formative years, through a lonely and precocious childhood and youth that included encounters with such historical giants as Gladstone, Parnell and Browning. Even more engrossing are the chapters dealing with Russell's early manhood and his contacts and correspondence with the greatest thinkers of his day — Keynes, Moore, Murray, Conrad, Eliot, Dickinson, Strachey, Cantor, Trevelyan, Whitehead, Santayana, Berenson, et al. It is fascinating to follow the brilliant exchanges among such figures.

It is unsettling, too, to note the general strain of depression and gloom with which this intelligensia regarded the society around them.

The weakness of this book is a frequent one with autobiographies. In his choice of material, the subject sometimes selects that of the greater personal interest instead of that of public concern. A biographer, no doubt, will some day make copious use of the material in this book is presenting a more objective, better balanced picture of young Russell and that time.

In the meantime, "The Autobiography of Bertrand Russell" makes delightful reading, written as it is with candor, wit and a remarkable sense of dedication to knowledge and to mankind. It throws a great deal of light upon a man who has never shirked the roles of non-conformist and reformer, not even in times when such approaches were even less popular than they are today — and upon the period and the conditions that produced him.

SOME NEW candidates for the always limited space on your reference and resource book shelf:

"The Home Book of American Quotations" (Dodd, Mead, $10) is a hefty 512-page volume put together by Bruce Bohle in much the same pattern as its older international counterpart, the classic Stevenson's "Home Book of Quotations." More than 9,000 quotations, arranged by subject and documented, are included. There is an index and concordance, and a numbering system, to facilitate quick location. The emphasis is upon American politics and humor, but many other fields are represented.

"Dictionary of American Slang" (Crowell, $7.95) is an updated version of a reference first issued in 1960 by the publisher of the famed "Roget's International Thesaurus." Harold Wentworth and Stuart Berg Flexner are the compilers, and the latter has now added a supplement to cover the new slang that has grown up since the publication of the original edition. It reflects such developments as the increased familiarity of homosexual terms, the impact of Vietnam and the war there upon our language, the hippie absorption with drugs and social revolt, etc. The shocking and the taboo as well as the every-day phraseology is included, along with some special articles on word relationships, etc.

"Reference Encyclopedia of the American Indian" (K. B. Klein, $15) is a unique volume that offers contemporary information on a neglected minority that can be found nowhere else under one cover. Bernard Klein, head of the publishing firm, and his associate, Daniel Icolari, have worked with a staff of researchers for more than a year in putting together listings of Indian museums and libraries, government and private agencies dealing with the original Americans, reservations and tribal councils, college courses, monuments, state parks, and books dealing with the original Americans, as well as biographies of the more prominent Indians. The book should prove of great interest and help to western history buffs and to scholars in a number of fields.

Crowell's Apollo Editions has issued a softcover version of John T. Gause's "The Complete Word Hunter" under the expanded title "The Complete University Word Hunter" ($2.45). It is a well indexed thesaurus-dictionary of some 6,000 words and expressions divided into 91 subject categories. A space-saver, it is also a practical, efficient tool for writer, teacher and student.

Also new from Apollo are two more specialized reference books, "University Dictionary of Business and Finance" ($2.50) and "A Concise Dictionary of Music" ($2.25). The former, first published in 1957, was compiled by Donald T. Clark and Bert A. Gottfried for the businessman's desk and for the student of economics. It defines professional terms precisely, and has been organized for rapid usage. The music dictionary is the work of Jack M. and Corinne Watson. First issued in 1965, it is an introductory-level dictionary which emphasizes the composers and terms that young students are most likely to encounter. Examples, drawings and photographs amplify the text.

"Essential English Grammer" (Dover, $1) is another paperback book designed for those who wish to master basic grammar with a minimum investment of time. It lays the foundation for a firm grasp of correct and clear employment of the English language. Author Philip Gucker used his extensive experience as an adult education teacher of English grammar in the preparation of this book for those now embarrassed by those deficiencies in the native tongue that plague so many of us.

PETER L. DIXON is the surfer's writer.

His "The Complete Book of Surfing" is the classic guide in its field, and his Surfing Illustrated is its most popular periodical.

In "Men and Waves" he has put together an anthology of articles, stories and photographs about the colorful sport that is certain to appeal to the "hang ten" gang. Published now in paperback by Ballantine, it sells for 75 cents.

Sleuths & Suspense

It's obvious because of "The Man Who Killed Himself." Author Julian Symons adds to his growing list of superior mystery stories.

The man who kills himself is Arthur Brownjohn, a pitifully immature man whose wife lords it over him. He'd really like to kill her, but it is difficult for a timid man to make up his mind. So he decides to kill himself after Maj. Easonby Mellon (that matrimony expert who wears a wig and a false beard) meets Patricia Parker. She's pretty, and, the major discovers, pretty bad. But both serve Brownjohn so he can kill.

If Brownjohn can't drink or excite women, the major surely can, and he helps snare that bullying wife, Clare.

"How Is It That My White Knit Changed Color?"

Actually the knit fabric did not change color. Your knit is a "sandwich" type fabric with urethane foam between two fabrics. This foam will change color due to oxidation and turn a grayish - yellow. Because the outer fabric is loosely knit, the grayish-yellow shows through, making it appear as though the fabric had changed color. It did not. Separate the fabric from the foam and you will see the fabric remains white.

Sometimes the foam act as a sponge and pick up soil or dyes which when seen through the loose knit of the outer fabric appear to be a fabric color change. Unfortunately, there is no remedy for this condition. We can only hope that the manufacturer will provide a solution.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Some new books for the juniors:

Marin's talented husband and wife team of writer Edith Thacher and illustrator Clement Hurd have an assist from yet another Hurd, J. Thacher, in their latest, "Little Dog, Dreaming." (Harper, $2.50). It is an appealing story for pre-school and primary grade children about a little city dog who finally gets his wish—a summer in the country where he can run free. The little ones will indentify completely with both the aspirations and the adventures of the little canine hero.

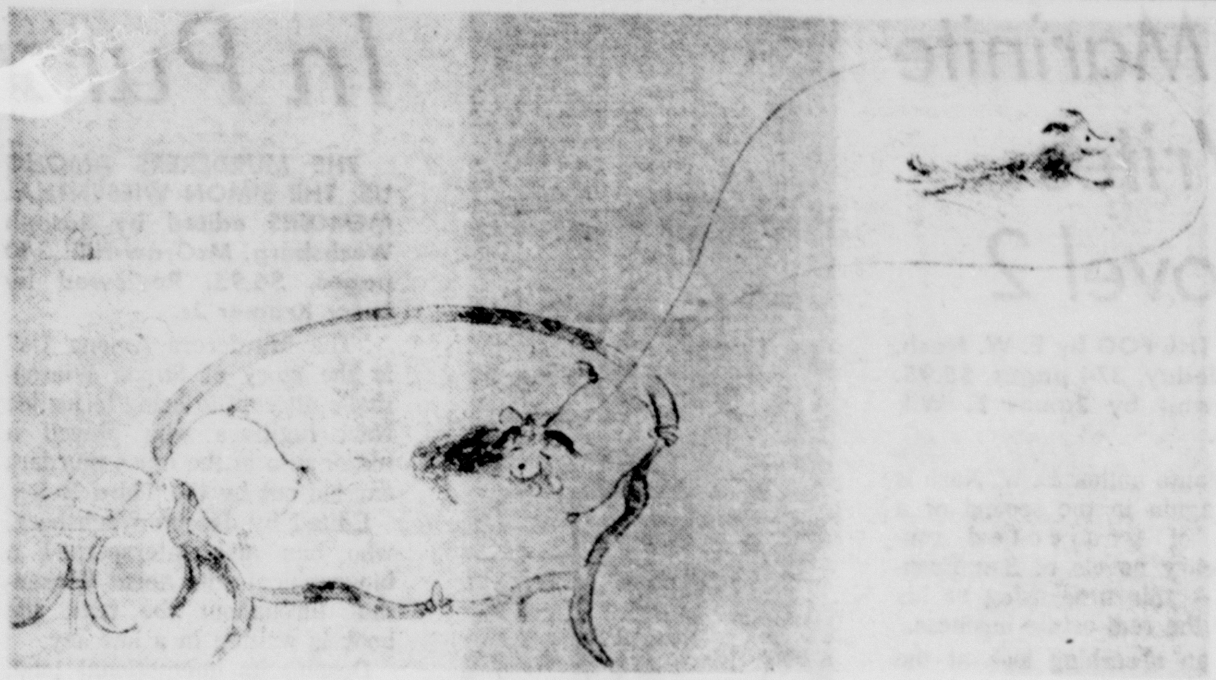
"Even Tiny Ants Must Sleep" by Harold J. Saleh (McGraw-Hill, $3.25) is one of those imaginative animal books that never fail to charm small boys and girls. It tells, with the help of humorous and distinctive artwork by Jerry Pinkney, how all creatures, big and small, need their slumber when the sun goes down. Both the subject matter and the lilt of the rhyming text are great for bedtime reading to get the tots in the mood for sleep.

Grandfathers are the favorite people of many boys and girls. They'll understand, then, Marilyn's adoration for hers in "Grandpa" (Harper, $2.95) by Barbara Borack with simple and delightful pictures by Ben Shecter. Marilyn tells some of the things that make her feel her grandpa is such a special person. This one is a standout.

"The Hungry Book" (Knopf, $3.50) by Charlotte Steiner deals with one hungry puppy and his search for his missing bone. During his hunt, he encounters many other animals enjoying their favorite foods. There is a gentle quality to both story and illustrations, and children cannot help but be delighted by the book.

What child doesn't watch with interest the activity of pond, inspect eagerly the transformation of polliwogs into frogs? That is the idea behind a beautifully simple book called "Small Pond" by Marguerite Walters, with wood engravings by Stefan Martin (Dutton, $3.50). The little book is divided into the four seasons, thus showing the contrast of life at a small pond throughout the year.

Most sports books for boys deal with the team games. But even more dramatic are the individual athletic events, with one competitor pitting his prowess and determination against another. "Duel on the Cinders" (Grosset & Dunlap) by Mark Porter deals with one of the finest, track and field. As a Tempo Books reprint, it sells for 45 cents. It is part of the popular Win Hadley series, and has both realistic and inspirational qualities.



MARIN'S HURD FAMILY has produced another children's book, this one entitled "Little Dog, Dreaming." Illustration from the book is by Clement Hurd.

A Marinite Writes Novel 2

IN THE FOG by E. W. Nash, Doubleday, 374 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James E. Wil liams.

Sausalito author E. W. Nash is back again in the second of a series of projected contemporary novels of San Francisco — this time using as his theme the real estate business.

It's an absorbing look at the multi-million dollar real estate world set in Marin County and its neighbor across the Golden Gate Bridge — San Francisco.

Author Nash, a nephew of Ogden Nash, has fashioned an interesting work with a marvelous group of characters drawn from the old rich of Portal, the name he has given San Francisco, the savings and loan world headed by a wheeler and dealer while his wife looks for a place in the establishment and a playmate, the hustling land developers and the young who are trying to become established in all of these elements.

His central character is a young Midwesterner, Dewey Johnson, out to gain his fortune in the real estate business. He thinks he has an instant formula for success, but in the process finds that he lacks the real drive to land on top of the heap.

Linked to Dewey's fortunes is the grand dame Miss Bannerette who is determined to give away her fortune to establish the Eskimo Curlew as the national bird.

Nash weaves these two major characters and many more into situations which are representative of today's society.

For those of us who are familiar with this area, Nash's use of such places as Tiburon Lagoon and Pacific Heights is thinly disguised. Possibly a reader not so closely connected with the area would not stop to play the locale guessing game which by nature is distracting, but fun.

Nash also includes Portal's two daily newspapers in the plot. He takes a swipe at them, showing the two bucking for circulation with headlines damning weak coffee, topless entertainers, the influx of suicides off the "bridge" and the use of "by our correspondent" stories.

It's a bold appraisal of today's society.

Nash should have a wealth of material to draw from in future books. For comparison of characters and situations his first book, "The Spencer Problem," might be worth a delayed reading, too.

Bureaucracy, Militarism And Decline

THE END OF THE ROMAN WORLD by Stewart Perowne, Thomas Y. Crowell Co., 158 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Rome was indeed "the world" to residents of the lands surrounding the Mediterranean for a period of 11 centuries. It is this "world" of which British scholar and author Stewart Perowne writes in "The End of the Roman World."

Perowne's thesis, aptly developed in his opening chapters, is that ever-growing bureaucracy and continuous military adventures sapped the strength of Rome and made its fall inevitable. There is a rather striking parallel here with present western civilization, particularly that of the United States.

He also sets out to refute Edward Gibbon's thesis that Christianity was in large part responsible for Rome's decline. This he does well; but he is less successful in his own thesis that Christianity in fact preserved much of the "grandeur that was Rome."

Perowne has done a great deal in a slim volume to contribute to appreciation and understanding of the civilization that left such a varied and impressive legacy for Europe and the Americas.

In Pursuit Of The Nazis

THE MURDERERS AMONG US: THE SIMON WIESENTHAL MEMOIRS edited by Joseph Wechsberg, McGraw-Hill, 340 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

"The Murderers Among Us" is the story of Simon Wiesenthal's attempt to bring to justice Nazi fugitives who played a major role in the mass murders carried out by the Third Reich.

Edited by Joseph Wechsberg, who has also interspersed a biographical note about Wiesenthal throughout the text, the book is written in a low key.

Despite its unemotional tone, "The Murderers Among Us" paints a stark and convincing picture of Wiesenthal's tenacity in pursuit, the enormity of the Nazi crimes, and the unpleasant fact that many present-day Germans and Austrians are more sympathetic with the apprehended murderers than with their victims.

Wiesenthal was the founder (and often sole employee) of the Documentation Center, now headquartered in Vienna, which patiently collected and sifted the clues that led to the capture of Adolph Eichmann. This brought him to the attention of the public, but he had been carrying on his persistent pursuit in a less dramatic way since 1947. As a victim of the concentration camps, with most of his relatives destroyed, Wiesenthal is committed to making the rest of the world come to grips with the reality of man's capacity for evil. As he says:

"By committing the perfectly incredible crime, the Nazis had hoped to get away with it before the bar of history. Future generations wouldn't believe that such a thing could have happened. Ergo, the Nazis deduced, history would one day conclude that it had not happened. The crime was of such a scope that it was inconceivable."

Reviews Of New Reading

Wiesenthal has made it impossible for the world to ignore what the Nazis did.

His descriptions of recent trials of Nazis in Austria and Germany, where the accused are applauded and the accusers abused, indicate that the human attitudes that made possible what happened between 1933 and 1945 die hard.

"The Murderers Among Us" is not a pleasant book, but it is an extremely well-written and important one.

Review Of Mooney-Billings Case: The Story Is Far From Pretty

FRAME-UP by Curt Gentry, W. W. Norton and Co., 477 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Untold thousands of words have been written about the Mooney-Billings case. Curt Gentry, San Francisco ex-newspaperman turned freelance writer, has distilled them all into one highly readable volume: "Frame-Up."

Its sub-title is "The Incredible Case of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings." It opens with a quotation from a letter by Fremont Older: "There isn't a scrap of testimony in either the Mooney or Billings cases that wasn't perjured, except that of the man who drew the blueprints of Market Street."

The story of how two men were kept in prison, respectively 22 years, five months and 12 days, and 23 years, two months and 23 days, for an atrocity that neither could have committed is told here in a fashion to grip the interest from first page to last.

Gentry has followed the record. He has not tried to whitewash either the bombastically obnoxious Mooney nor the serenely irrepressible Billings. Nor has he whitewashed anyone else in the case, including a series of California governors from William D. Stephens through Culbert L. Olson and a host of other prominent figures, some of whom are still alive and in high places. He has stuck to the record.

Doing so, he has told a tale that is far from pretty.

The informed reader can "fly speck" some minor errors, but they do not bear on the truth of the narrative. It is drawn from the official files. They tell their own tale.

The Mooney-Billings case has been called "the California Sacco-Vanzetti case." There are parallels. But there was less evidence to tie Mooney and Billings to the Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco than there was to associate Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti with the South Braintree payroll robbery-killing.

A closer parallel would be the Haymarket case.

Four men were put to death for that bombing, but no one ever pretended that any of them threw the bomb. Even Capt. Michael J. Schaack and State's Attorney Julius S. Grinnell did not stoop to the methods used by Martin Swanson and Dist. Atty. Charles M. Fickert. And Michael Schwab, Samuel Fielden and Oscar Neebe had to wait only one change of administration until a governor— John Peter Altgeld—was elected in Illinois who was willing to lay his political career on the line in the interest of justice. Mooney and Billings waited through six administrations, and even Olson tried to renege on freeing Billings.

The parallel was close, though. August Spies, Albert R. Parsons, Adolph Fischer and George Engel were hanged — (and Louis Lingg would have been had he not killed himself in his cell) and Schwab, Fielden and Neebe were imprisoned— not for the crime with which they were charged but because they were labor agitators, radicals dangerous to the established order of things.

Mooney and Billings were held in prison for the same reason.

Hardly anyone comes out looking well in Gentry's account of "Frame-Up." Only three perhaps fully qualify as heroes—Fremont Older, George T. Davis, and (despite an admittedly criminal youth) Warren K. Billings.

The Cuisine And Food Lore Of Italy's Many Regions

THE BEST OF ITALIAN COOKING by Nika Standen Hazelton, World, 216 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Nika Standen Hazelton, versatile cookbook author, reviewer and writer, has turned her attention here to the cuisine of the country in which she was reared.

She has made a special effort to avoid entrapment in the familiar South Italian dishes of spaghetti and tomato sauce, pizza and eggplant parmigiana, and has given full coverage to the country's many other regions as well.

She has taken pains to avoid repetition. Instead of offering several variations for each dish, she has given only the recipe she regards as best.

There's an introduction covering the history of Italian food, how it is served and eaten, plus special discussions of wines, breads, cheeses, apertifs, seasonings, flavorings and the pastes.

With recipes adapted to American measurements and ingredients, she then takes you through the Italian menu, from antipasto to dessert. Along the way you will encounter and smack your lips over the likes of Christmas fish and vegetable salad from Genoa, spinach and rice soup, spaghetti with fresh peas, green noodles with basil, Roman dumplings, zucchini omelet, baked fish with green sauce, lamb stew with egg sauce chicken livers with sage, Florentine mushrooms, uncooked sweet pepper sauce, flamed chestnuts, Easter pie from Naples, and much, much more.

PUCCINI: La Boheme — Victoria de los Angeles/Jussi Bjorling/Lucine Amara/Robert Merrill/Tozzo/Reardon/Corena/orchestra and chorus conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham — Seraphim mono IB-6000:

Seraphim —"Angels of the highest order" — is the new bargain label of Angel Records. It has already become one of the biggest success stories in introducing a new line of recordings, in the space of only a few months.

This is THE Boheme to own unless you're a complete stereo nut and can't listen to anything with good mono sound. Beautiful, beautiful in every way from first note to last.

THE INIMITABLE SIR THOMAS — SIBELIUS: Tapiola; DELIUS: Summer Evening and Prelude to Irmelin; DVORAK: Legend No. 3; GRIEG: Symphonic Dance No. 2; FAURE: Pavane — Royal Philharmonic and French National Radio Orchestras/Sir Thomas Beecham — Seraphim Stereo 60000:

The enchantment of Delius as performed by the great Beecham is not everybody's meat, but connoisseurs of this genre find its ravishing tonal world a great experience.

The other music in this little collection of Beecham performances from the late 1950s has much in common with the moods of Delius. The Sibelius work, longest on the disc, is wonderfully evocative. Sound is good.

GERALD MOORE — "THE UNASHAMED ACCOMPANIST" —Seraphim mono 60017:

I was overjoyed to see this item turn up on the initial Seraphim release. My old Angel copy was becoming annoyingly scratchy, although I think most of the scratch was on the pressing to begin with.

This new pressing has a silent surface in addition to the low price. Moore's name will be immediately familiar to most fans of the art song — he has accompanied such top voices as Chalapin, John McCormack, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf and Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau. During this hour musical lecture, he endeavors to explain the task of the piano accompanist and to get the listener, through an urbane and delightful witty approach, to pay more attention to what is going on in the piano part during songs of Schubert, Wolf et al.

HOW MUSIC AFFECTED A HONEYMOON — The Italians have for many years practiced the wonderful custom of serenading. During my generation the art of serenading, in this country, is fading away. A serenade usually started with three or more musicians (mandolins, guitars, a clarinet and sometimes a bass fiddle) getting together at about midnight and taking off to the home of a friend. The musicians would gather quietly beneath the darkened bedroom window and start to play and sing. Soon the lights in the bedroom would go on and the musicians would move to the front door to be let in. The festivities would start. There would be wine and food, then the serenaders accompanied by the first couple would move on to the home of another friend. The process would continue until morning.

On one occasion, the serenaders congregated in the front yard of a newlywed couple. The bride was about 18 years young and the groom in his early twenties. The honeymooners had just moved into an upstairs flat. The landlord, not an Italian, lived below. The story starts with the newlyweds waking to the strains of music and song. The groom was just about to turn on the lights, when loud shouting and angry voices burst upon the scene. The lights remained off. Suddenly, a shot rang out—there was a moan and the scuffle of feet—then all was quiet. After what seemed like ages, there were loud knocks on the honeymooner's door. Still they kept the lights off — then, "Open up, this is the police." After several knocks the couple opened up and, of course, refused having heard anything or having recognized any voices. One guitar had been left behind, but the groom pretended not to know its owner. To make the story short, the groom was taken to jail for questioning, and the very young bride was so scared that she wouldn't be left alone and insisted on going with her husband to jail.

My mother and father spent their honeymoon night in the jail house because my father wouldn't talk. Next week, on their Golden Wedding Anniversary, the unfinished serenade will be resumed by their two sons.

BRIGHT IDEAS: Checkers On The Ceiling

By JOE JONES

To make a small room look larger or if you just want to be different then checkerboard your ceiling.

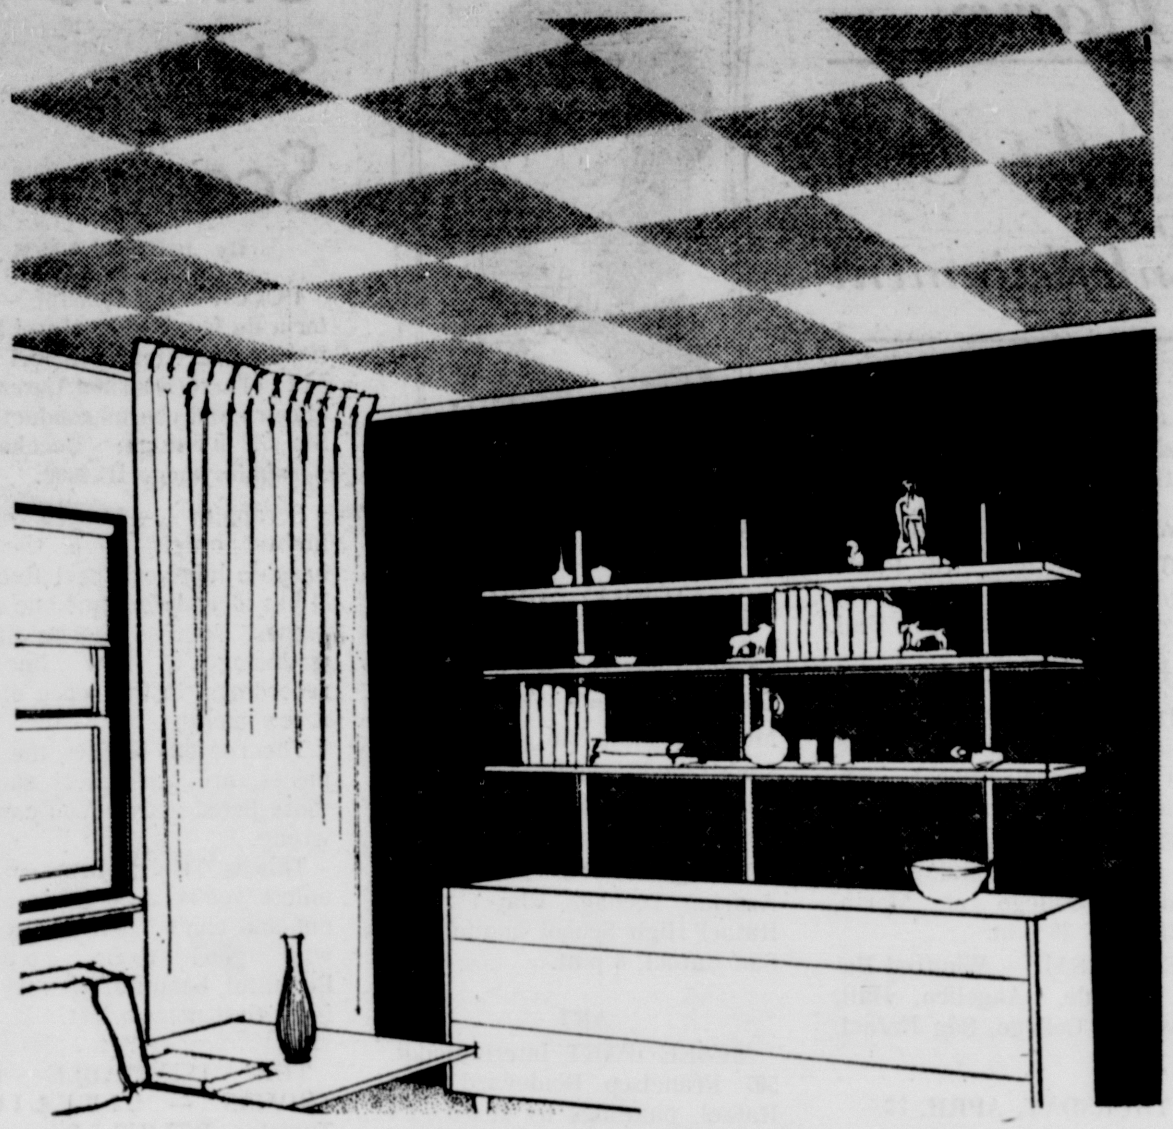
It is not as difficult as it seems, if you use non-drip, fast-drying paint.

Here's how: First apply a coat of ceiling white with a long-handled roller, as a base.

Measure the length and width of the room accurately in feet (measure the floor—it is the same as the ceiling). Draw a rectangle on a piece of paper, with one inch representing one foot (the room shown here was 10 by 12 feet).

It was decided in this case to make the squares two by two feet, so the plan was divided into squares accordingly. After the squares on the plan had been keyed as to which were to be colored, the pattern was then transferred to the ceiling, using a wooden yardstick and a light pencil.

After penciling in the ceiling, it was masked with two-inch masking tape. All the ceiling could not be masked at once, so nine squares were masked and painted. Then after drying, the remaining six were masked and painted.



Play It Safe On Ladders

More important than how well you paint the outside of your house is that you don't wind up in a hospital before you finish the job.

To get a good result involves a combination of proper preparation and adherence to certain fundamentals.

To avoid an accident with a long ladder calls for a similar combination. You have to see that the ladder is placed against the house so that it won't slip. And you have to observe safety precautions so that you won't fall off the ladder while doing the painting.

IF THE BASE of the ladder is the right distance from the foundation of the house, it will be properly balanced. The "right distance" is one-fourth the length of the ladder. Thus, with a 16-foot ladder, the base should be four feet from the foundation.

But this isn't enough to insure safety, especially on ground that is either too soft or too hard. If the soil is soft, the ladder should rest on a wide, solid board and should be tested thoroughly by standing on the bottom rung and jumping up and down until you are convinced the board will stay put.

If the ladder is resting on concrete or a similar surface, its feet should be equipped with safety treads or one of the other devices which prevent slipping.

WHERE THERE is even the slightest doubt about the solidity of the setup, use roof ladder hooks, which fasten onto the high rungs of the ladder and hook over the roof edge. Also it's a good idea to use sneakers or rubber-soled shoes, making certain they are not wet or muddy when you climb the ladder.

Now that you've made certain that the ladder will behave itself, make equally certain that you do the same.

Don't stand on the top rung of the ladder. Never go higher than the second step from the top; if possible, don't go higher than the third step from the top. Trouble can be avoided here if the ladder is long enough. When you begin the actual painting, don't reach out too far on either side of the ladder. Take the extra time to go down the ladder and move it over to the working area.

NEVER TURN your back on the ladder. If that sounds like superfluous advice, it isn't. Many accidents are caused when painters descend without fully facing the ladder.

When working in front of a door, either keep it wide open or lock it, placing the precautionary sign on the inside of the door. The wrong time to paint the outside of your house is when children are playing nearby. A running child can bump into the ladder base and cause disaster.

Another potential troublemaker is lack of time. As with so many other do-it-yourself projects, haste is an enemy. With most tasks, you merely spoil the result.

Try Unfinished Furniture As Easy Handyman Project

One of the best ways to "get your feet wet" in the area of wood finishing is to utilize the unfinished furniture sold in lumber yards, building supply establishments, large hardware stores and many variety and department stores, as well as places which make and sell nothing except this kind of merchandise.

Unfinished pieces of furniture can be purchased in a wide variety of woods, with special emphasis on the kind most readily available in the area of the sale.

SOFT WOODS most generally are used, especially those which are relatively inexpensive and can be worked easily. But unfinished hardwood also can be obtained in certain stores.

A single unfinished item, such as a bookcase, can be used for experimental purposes if you so desire. If you have never seriously worked with any of the clear finishes, for instance, you might try giving one side of the bookcase a coat of shellac, the other side a coat of varnish and each of the shelves a different type of coating.

Sound a bit frivolous? Actually, it can be very interesting, as well as giving you some insight on how different finishes "take" on that specific kind of wood. It also gives you an idea of the differences in methods of application.

ANOTHER EXCELLENT experiment, as a starter, might be to take a can of wood stain and see how many different tones you can get with it by the length of time it is left on a portion of the wood before wiping it off.

The longer it is left on the darker the result. Some wood finishers get extra light shades by diluting the stain, if it has an oil base, with turpentine, applying it and wiping it off almost instantly.

Or you might further your wood finishing education by using a fine grade of sandpaper on one part of the bookcase and applying a finish on an unsanded part and noting the difference.

A few such tests as these, plus any others you might want to try, will give you a much better feeling for wood finishing than if you immediately went to work on a project. It also will give you the confidence necessary to tackle a good piece of furniture, which many novices avoid because they are afraid they might botch the job.

The Palm Belongs In California

The mention of palms usually stirs up visions of an oasis in the desert or a lush tropical isle.

Yet we are wrong to think of palms as something remote, for California is ideally suited to growing them and one finds many good garden varieties for sale. You can use them to create your own backyard paradise.

TROUBLE LIES in trying to decide which one. There are well over 2,000 varieties of palms, and choosing from them can be difficult. Fortunately only a dozen or two are generally available in nurseries.

Nurserymen recommend against growing oversize palms such as the Canary Island Date Palm in small gardens. However, for each palm unsuited to small garden culture, there are a half a dozen or more that nurserymen recommend.

You can choose from the following three, each of which is uncommonly beautiful.

FOR A STARTER we have the Lady Palm, or Bamboo Palm, as some call it. This modest fan palm grows in a clump or cluster of long-stemmed trunks, each topped by a deeply split fan. If reeds grew to eight and more feet in height, these might be mistaken for such. They are definitely reed-like.

Grow them in a clump beside the lawn or in a tub. There are two members of the group to choose from.

One dwarf in the stately family of date palms is the Pigmy Date Palm. Refined to the utmost, it grows six to eight feet high — like a rugged tree fern — and then holds that height. Try it in a tub, indoors or out.

Roses As Versatile As They Are Pretty

Roses can be the most formal of all flowers, their place set aside by a special bed wherein they are tended with loving care and enthusiasm on the part of the amateur rosarian.

Or they can be grown informally, incorporated into the landscape in many different ways. Show-quality blooms come from the former method of handling, but the showiest roses are often those which are handled informally.

Consider first, the lovely climbing rose which is trained up and onto a garage eave or along a fence. When in full bloom, as often it is between late spring and late fall, this climbing rose can provide you with unbelievable beauty.

Consider, too, the two pillar roses which have been trained up and over an arch to form a colorful gateway to the garden. Can you imagine an arch through which you'd rather walk?

One intriguing suggestion is to grow roses for a colorful display on the patio or on a deck. The floribunda and grandiflora varieties are usually best for container culture, but there's no reason you can't handle a favorite hybrid tea rose this way also.

THE CONTAINER for growing a rose should give it ample room to develop a root system, which in turn will support a vigorous head of bloom. A redwood planter box for this, with a depth of 12 inches at least, and a diameter of 16 inches, is excellent.

Trellising a climbing rose against the side of a house or against a fence is colorful. Or try growing the same type rose atop a retainer-wall letting its blooms tumble and cascade. And certainly train a climbing rose up onto a pergola or arbor if you have one.

Standard or tree roses are formal but colorful for lining a walk or planting beside a drive.

Here's One Way To Beat The High Cost Of Food

Increasing attention paid food costs has also increased the interest in home gardens.

For example, a packet of carrot seed, properly planted and cared for, can produce over 2,000 carrots — enough to supply a family of eight for a year, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture figures.

With new hybrid varieties, yields can be about 25 per cent higher, say Northrup King vegetable growing experts.

BUT A FAR greater reason for home gardening, is the fresh garden ripe vegetables to pick just in time for meals. When meals threaten to become routine, fresh vegetables add new zest to summer menus.

Whether your carrots are cooked or raw, they offer a pleasant flavor, texture and color contrast to a meal. Crunchy, flavorful carrot sticks are an excellent vitamin A source — so essential for growing children — and they are low calorie treats for family weight watchers.

For an all-family hobby, gardening can't be beat. Even the youngest family member can participate and appreciate the products produced. When fall rolls around, the unused carrots are easily stored in a cool, relatively moist room for fresh garden flavor through the winter. Beets, cabbage, onion, rutabagas, winter squash, and turnips can also be stored for extended periods in this same simple way.

WHETHER YOUR carrots grow in a garden plot or are used as dainty, delicate border around your flower bed, planting and cultural methods are important for a successful crop. Most packets have planting instructions on the back.

Many carrot varieties are available. Northrup, King and Co., one large seed company with many seed racks in our area, says it has nine carrot varieties and almost 350 vegetable varieties. The selection of varieties included in Marin racks are those specifically adapted to the area's growing conditions, horticulturists point out.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- It is dahlia-planting time in Marin County. Plant your tubers to a depth of six to eight inches, after first preparing the soil to a depth of about 18 inches.
- Hedge plants set out now will give good growth during late spring and summer. Try Wax Leaf Privet for a handsome hedge, high or low.
- Pinch and prune fuchsias as they grow to shape them and to encourage side branching for added bloom.
- A regular care program of feeding, watering and spraying will insure healthy roses, better blooms.
- Set tomato plants out now for summer crops. Nurserymen offer varieties best suited to our climate.
- Feed tuberous begonias with liquid fish fertilizer — twice a month for potted plants, once a month for those in the ground.

Where's The Talent? In TV Commercials

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The perennial problem in show business: Where to find new talent? Here's one answer: Television commercials.

The decline of such proving grounds as repertory, vaudeville, night clubs and B movies makes it ever more difficult for newcomers to train themselves and be discovered for the big-time. Lately the much-maligned television commercial has produced a clutch of young, imaginative film directors in London and New York.

She is a Pittsburgh, Pa., girl who studied drama at Carnegie Tech, later graduated from the Copacabana line to perform in commercials. She became famous as the tiger girl with her sultry pitch for a men's hair cream. "Sic 'em, tiger," she murmured, and sales mounted.

Her fame led to an offer to costar as Don Adams' loyal sidekick, Agent 99, in the NBC series, "Get Smart." That in turn led to a costarring role with Dick Van Dyke in a new film, "Garden of Cucumbers."

ONLY NOW IS she earning as much as she did as the tiger girl.

She says: "I made more money working three days a year for Revlon than I did working 30 weeks at 13 hours a day during the first season of "Get Smart."

"Once I reported for a commercial in which they wanted to use one of my eyes," she recalled. "All I had to do was close the eye and open it. I worked a half-hour and for a whole year I collected $200 a week as the commercial was played."

THE BIG MONEY in commercials, she observed, comes when a girl is signed to a contract as spokeswoman or symbol for a certain product. Only a few have been so fortunate, among them: Edie Adams, Betty Furness, Barbara Britton—and Barbara Feldon.

If the work was so lucrative, why did she turn to acting?

"You have to be well-adjusted to handle a commercial contract," she said. "You work so little that you must find ways to occupy your time. I managed pretty well, but sometimes the inactivity became wearing. Besides, I felt that I needed to progress in my career. I couldn't be the tiger girl forever."

Europe Goes Wild Over 'Untouchables'

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bob Stack is enjoying a monumental renaissance of his career in Europe with a smoking gun in his hand in the role of Eliot Ness.

"The Untouchables" has been beaming in France, Belgium and Germany for a year and a half now and Stack has become a legendary hero.

WHEREVER HE sets foot abroad he is mobbed by fans on the one hand and by producers eager to capitalize on his popularity on the other. Right now there isn't a hotter star in Europe.

A television star equally hot in the United States can't get arrested in movies. But over there Bob is a super star. He recently completed two pictures, "The Corrupt Ones" with Elke Sommer and "Action Man" with longtime French idol Jean Gabin — both in Europe.

"They didn't televise 'The Untouchables' in Europe for several years because they were afraid of it," Stack said. "They were worried about all the gangster and violence.

"MANY STATE-OWNED stations refused to consider it. But when it did break through, after a couple of test runs in Paris, it became an instant hit.

"I heard about its success but when I arrived in Paris I had no idea the French had gone crazy about Ness. When I went on location for the movie, the town of St. Germain adopted me. It's all pretty wild."

Stack further endeared himself to the fractious French by speaking their native tongue faultlessly. He did, in fact, learn to speak French before English when his mother took him abroad as an infant.

IN THE PICTURE with Gabin the American star spoke all his lines in French. He returned to dub the English version.

"Europeans make no distinction between a star on television and a movie star," he said. "They are interchangeable.

"Even in the heyday of 'The Untouchables' in this country there wasn't the frenzy of excitement that there is in Europe. It's given me a feeling of freedom. I can stay loose now and look for good properties. There is a diversity of interests instead of being forced to deal strictly with five major studios."

Bob has a new career going for him, thanks to a tough untouchable named Eliot Ness.
